WASHINGTON (AP) — Machete-wielding terrorists held more than 100 hostages in three buildings today, threatening to chop off heads of captives unless they are allowed to exact revenge against Black Muslim leaders they blame for a mass murder four years ago.

Gunmen, all believed to be members of the tiny, predominantly black Hanafi Moslem sect, seized the headquarters of a Jewish social service organization, an Islamic mosque and the District of Columbia city hall.

During the takeover of city hall, a black reporter for a Washington radio station was killed and a city councilman was wounded.

Police surrounded the three buildings and tried to negotiate with the men who were armed with rifles, shotguns, automatic weapons and machetes.

But as the siege continued through the night police remained uncertain how many hostages were being held and how many terrorists were in the buildings.

The largest group of hostages was being held in the eighth-floor cafeteria of the B'nai B'rith headquarters, seven blocks north of the White House. An official of the Jewish service organization said he believed as many as 118 people were in the hands of the terrorists.

Another 14 hostages were being held at the Islamic Center on Washington's Embassy Row and seven were inside the District Building, located on Pennsylvania Avenue within sight of the White House grounds.

At least three persons in the B'nai B'rith building were believed wounded.

In a telephone conversation from the B'nai B'rith building, one of the terrorists, Khalafi Hamaas Abdul

Khaalis, was asked if he would hold out indefinitely. He told an Associated Press reporter, "Don't worry, when the heads start dropping out the window, then you worry."

Abdul Khaalis described himself as the leader of the Hanafi Moslems.

His son-in-law, Abdul Aziz, was contacted in the northwest Washington headquarters of the Hanafi Moslems where the murders took place four years ago. Abdul Aziz told reporters that if the demands of the terrorists were not met, "heads will be chopped off. A killing room will be set up at B'nai B'rith and heads will be thrown out of windows."

Mayor Walter Washington, who had been barricaded in his city hall office for several hours early in the takeover but later escaped the building, said early today that foreign diplomats were involved in discussions with the Hanafi gunmen.

Abdul Khaalis denied any knowledge of such negotiations.

Revenge for the brutal 1973 murders of seven Hanafis, six of whom were Abdul Khaalis' children, appeared to be the principal motive for the sudden invasion of the three buildings late Wednesday morning. Five Philadelphia Black Muslims were convicted of the 1973 slayings and each was sentenced to 140 years in prison.

In telephone conversations with newsmen, Abdul Khaalis blamed Black Muslim leaders, including heavyweight boxing champion

Town Meeting Still Alive In Maine

NORTH HAVEN, Maine (AP) — The townspeople began gathering well before the appointed hour of nine, neighbors all, tied to this town and this island by blood and heritage and to this gathering by a tradition older than the republic.

It began when the first Plymouth colonists met to decide among themselves matters of their common concern.

Their descendants, literal descendants in some cases on this coastal New England isle, have found no reason to change such a sensible system of direct democracy or any way to improve upon it.

Thus none of the island's 400 citizens needed further encouragement to attend than the notice posted on the bulletin board outside Waterman's general store at the town dock:

Town Meeting.

Across New England during the first two weeks in March other towns held similar meetings. Large anonymous cities may have abandoned annual one-day assemblies as too unwieldy, but towns such as North Haven yet exist as reminders that some places in this bureaucratic land have neither outgrown their identities nor yielded the Yankee notion of self-government to professionals or computers.

"David, I think Lisa had her hand up first, we'll hear you next if that's all right ..."

"I'm going to have to disagree with you, Eliot ..."

"Before we go any further I think this town owes a vote of thanks to Jimmy Brown ..."

"Ivaloo, count the hands along with me so we get the vote right ..."

With dispatch, but more important with civility and mutual trust, North Haven's citizens last Monday elected their officials, voted taxes for street lights, roads, snow fences, fireplugs, settled disagreements over clamming grounds and ferryboat service, and went home after 5½ hours satisfied that no voice was excluded, no opinion suppressed.

Saccharin Banned By FDA Regulation As Health Hazard

WASHINGTON (AP) — Diabetics and others who can't eat sugar might be able to get saccharin as a prescription drug after the proposed federal ban on the artificial sweetener goes into effect.

The Food and Drug Administration announced the ban on saccharin Wednesday, citing a Canadian study that found large doses of the sweetener caused cancer in laboratory rats.

Canada simultaneously banned saccharin.

The FEA said it would take at least 120 days to put the ban into effect, but it called on manufacturers "to discontinue use of saccharin as soon as possible."

In announcing the ban, the FDA said it would consider allowing some limited use of saccharin to continue because no substitutes for it would be available in the near future.

But Acting FDA Commissioner Sherwin Gardner said any decision on the prescription approach was still months away.

Canada said those on restricted diets will be able to buy pure saccharin only in drug stores after Sept. 1.

Bill Collectors Urge Law On Deadbeats

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bill collector organizations say Congress should be making laws against "deadbeats" instead of trying to regulate the people who pursue them.

Representatives of bill collector organizations told a House banking subcommittee Wednesday that people who do pay their bills end up paying higher prices because of those who don't.

The panel hearings end today with testimony from consumer groups.

The collectors' testimony followed a string of witnesses who told of harassment of debtors by bill collectors, including late night phone calls and threats. But the collectors urged Congress to crack down on deadbeats instead of writing new restrictions on collectors.

"The individual consumer, you and me, must eventually pay the bills for the deadbeats," said Philip Rosenthal, president of the Virginia Collectors Association.

Michael Goldberg, incoming president of the American Collectors Association, said utility bills may be increased "as much as $5 per year to the customers who pay their accounts as a result of the money that is written off for bad debts."

And giving examples, Rosenthal picked the Prince Georges County, Md., Hospital in the home district of Rep. Gladys Spellman, D-Md., a subcommittee member. He said the hospital canceled more than $4 million in uncollected bills last year.

"This lost revenue was made up through employee layoffs, increased insurance premiums and higher bills for all of the people of Mrs. Spellman's congressional district," he said.

Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., chairman of the subcommittee, has sponsored legislation to make threats or harassing tactics by bill collectors illegal. He said his bill would not protect people who refuse to pay a debt.

"I hold no sympathy for anyone who is capable of paying a debt and simply refuses to honor the obligation," he said.

City, County Firemen Fight 8 Fires Wednesday

FIREY WEDNESDAY — Was the story in Pickaway County Wednesday afternoon, as six county fire departments battled as many fires in a four hour period. A Clearcreek fire truck is pictured above as Clearcreek and

Pickaway Twp. firemen battle a small pocket of a 12:54 p.m. blaze that threatened Knollwood Village and other houses in the area.

Circleville firemen battled two fires within an hour in the late morning and early afternoon Wednesday.

The first call came at 11:45 a.m. at the Container Corporation plant on Mill Street. A small fire had developed in some scrap paper in a storage area. The fire had been contained by the Container Corporation fire brigade on the arrival of the C.F.D. units. Firemen were at the scene for 20 minutes.

The second alarm of the day came at 12:37 p.m. at the Charles Carle residence, 158 E. Union St. The blaze was called in by Mrs. Jeannie Carle.

Two fire units initially responded to the blaze, which supposedly started in an upstairs bedroom from causes that are unknown at this time.

A third C.F.D. truck was called to the scene approximately 30 minutes later. The loss on the house and its contents has not yet been determined. Two men were injured while fighting the fire. Fireman Martin Garner received lacerations at his left hand from broken glass, and Lt. Dan Grant was treated and released from the Berger Hospital Emergency Room for exhaustion.

A total of seven firemen were on the scene for two hours and 15 minutes.

Fire fighters in Pickaway County were kept busy also with six blazes in a four-hour period Wednesday afternoon.

Clearcreek and Pickaway units battled a 12:54 p.m. grass fire on Pontious Road that threatened Knollwood Village.

The Clearcreek Department also fought a 12:19 p.m. grass fire on Railroad St. in Stoutsville, and the Williamsport Fire Department battled a 1:44 p.m. car fire on Route 22.

Saltcreek, Tarlton, and Whisler units fought a 2:31 p.m. blaze in a field off Heffner Road, the Mt. Sterling Fire Department fought a 4 p.m. fire in Era, and the Tarlton Department fought a grass fire 4:34 p.m. in Tarlton.

In addition, Kingston and Pickaway Twp. units were called to a false fire alarm at PPG Industries at 3:16 p.m., and Harrison Twp. units were summoned to avert a possible LP gas explosion at Gregor's Trailer Court 1:31 p.m.

HOUSE FIRE — Circleville Firemen are pictured above as they try to extinguish a pocket of flames near the roof of the Charles Carle residence, 158 E. Union St. The fire is believed to have started in the upstairs bedroom, but the cause of the blaze is still undetermined. Three pieces of equipment and seven firemen were at the scene for two hours and 15 minutes.

City-County Complex Revived?

Circleville city officials plan to contact county commissioners to see if there is a possibility of reviving the city-county justice complex plan.

In a meeting with Prindle, Patrick and Partners Tuesday there appeared to be near unanimous agreement that a joint project would be the best answer to the inadequate court facilities here.

Present at the meeting were members of council, Mayor Frank Barnhill, Fred Weingand, chief of design for the architectural firm, Municipal Court Judge Charles Hosterman; Leo Hall, president of the Pickaway County Bar Assn.

The architects had requested a meeting to present a slide review of other government complexes they had designed.

John McGinnis, a representative of the firm, said they had conducted the original study which recommended a city-county complex which would house probate, common pleas, juvenile and municipal courts, a jail and the sheriff and police departments.

The study was done for the Pickaway County Commissioners who at that time were Dick Tootle, Charles Morris and Wayne Hines, and it was federally funded. The project never got off the ground although the commissioners acquired real estate immediately west of the present court house and jail for its construction. The main stumbling block in the way of construction was funding.

Markets

NEW YORK (AP) —The stock market declined again today as government figures confirmed Wall Street's fears of a two-digit rise in the wholesale price index last month.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks slipped nearly 2 points in early trading, and losers outnumbered gainers by about a 4-3 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

As the market opened, the Labor Department reported that the wholesale price index rose 0.9 per cent in February after seasonal adjustment, for the equivalent of a 10-8 per cent annual rate.

The data reflected the effects of bad weather on agricultural product prices.

Stocks traded actively included Citicorp, down 1/4 at 28 3/4; General Motors, off 1/2 at 70 3/4; Sterling Drug, 1/4 lower at 15 1/4, and American Telephone & Telegraph, down 1/4 at 62 3/4.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 9.14 to 942.00, in its biggest drop since it gave up 9.64 points on Jan. 20.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about a 9-4 margin on the NYSE.

The NYSE's composite index lost .41 to 54.42.

Dynamite Blast Probe Continues

CAREY, Ohio (AP) — The explosion of 20 tons of dynamite near this village shook northwest Ohio, popped nails from walls in a deputy sheriff's bedroom and caused property damage up to 20 miles from the rural scene.

No one was injured. But houses, barns and businesses were damaged, mostly in a northeasterly direction from the rural site 1 1/2 miles northeast of the village of 3,500 persons.

Sheriff Mark R. Kauble of Wyandot County said the dynamite owned by a stone quarry "was detonated by someone who had knowledge of explosives." He said there were no suspects in the Wednesday predawn blast but that his staff followed up reports from persons who claimed to have knowledge of the explosion.

"We're not pointing a finger at anybody," Kauble said. "But if it was done by someone locally we might have an arrest in a couple of days."

"The scene evidence indicates it was intentionally detonated and virtually eliminates the possibility of an accident."

Kauble declined to discuss the evidence.

"Dad said he at first thought it was an earthquake," said Bill Lindsay, 34, who rushed here from Defiance, Ohio, 40 miles away, when his father called. "I think that clump of trees between us and the dynamite was the only thing that kept it from leveling their home."

"All the windows are gone and the second floor of the house is shifted."

"I thought at first it was going to be a tornado," said John Greer, 73, who lives near the Lindsays. "But I looked out and saw a clear sky and I didn't know what it was." Greer's barn was moved on its foundation and its doors blown off. Glass littered the bed where Greer and his wife had been sleeping.

Both live a half-mile from the explosion of what Kauble estimated was 40,000-50,000 pounds of dynamite stored in a munitions-like magazine by the National Stone and Lime Quarry. Ray Brandon, director of safety for the quarry, declined to estimate the quantity of dynamite that went up but said "It was in the thousands of pounds."

Relatives Await Action On Terrorists

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Relax and be patient," says the sign under the big red cross on the door of the church. But the people inside are not relaxed. They are not patient.

"How can we relax? Our mothers, fathers, sisters, brothers — the people we love are there," asks a girl who waits.

Ebbing and flowing, about 100 people wait for word about the fate of their relatives and friends who were taken hostage by terrorists Wednesday at the B'nai B'rith headquarters several blocks away.

They wait in a brightly lit, cot-lined basement of the Foundry Methodist Church. The mood is quiet, almost fragile. People speak very gently and politely. Two women hold hands, relatives embrace.

But there is a current of anger. Here and there, angry young men in jeans and track shoes huddle and mutter. They come in. They leave without explanation.

One young man exercises on the floor, stretching his legs, while a man being interviewed on television spouts hatred for Jews. The young man:

U.N. Rights Panel Hears Chile Case

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The U.N. Human Rights Commission, with U.S. support, has condemned repression by Chile's military junta, but the 32-nation panel rebuffed a British bid for public debate of mass murder charged to President Idi Amin in Uganda.

The United States voted for the anti-Chilean resolution Wednesday although the Carter administration repudiated the admission by its representative at the meeting that the U.S. government had a part in the "subversion" of the elected Marxist government overthrown by the junta.

The resolution denounced "constant and flagrant violations of human rights" in Chile and was adopted by a 26-1 vote. Uruguay cast the negative vote, while Jordan and four Latin American nations — Peru, Panama, Costa Rica and Ecuador — abstained.

The United States during the Nixon and Ford administrations abstained on similar resolutions critical of the Chilean junta, but this time it was among the cosponsors of the resolution, along with the Soviet Union and Cuba. The change presumably reflected President Carter's stated concern for human rights throughout the world.

By a vote of 17-8, the human rights body also adopted a Cuban motion to take up in private session a British resolution calling for an inquiry by the commission into the human rights situation in Uganda. As usual, the Africans and Soviet Bloc members voted together and were expected to kill the British resolution if it ever comes to a vote. The United States, Canada, Britain, West Germany, Sweden, Italy, Uruguay and Costa Rica voted against the secret debate.

Fort Wayne One Germ War City

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — Results of secret germ warfare tests conducted in Fort Wayne during the last decade will remain classified for national security reasons.

The Army released a list of the test sites this week. Fort Wayne, Indiana's second largest city, and its environs were a test area between July 29, 1964, and Feb. 5, 1966, authorities said.

The Army report said a simulant involving fluorescent particles was disseminated by aerosol over downtown Fort Wayne and the surrounding area.

The city was selected because of its climate and topography, the Army said. It was the only test area identified in Indiana.

curses and sneers.

Later in the evening, the families meet with Dan Thursz, executive vice president of B'nai B'rith. He is trying to compile an accurate list of hostages, and he begins reading names from payroll records, guest books and any other source he can find. These are the people he thinks were in the building when the terrorists struck.

About 50 hushed people cluster around. Occasionally, a name is called and someone says that person is safe. "Are you sure?" Thursz asks. A name is taken from the list.

But that happens rarely, and when Thursz is done, there are 120 names still on the list, still presumably on the eighth floor of the B'nai B'rith building. "I think it's going to be a long wait," Thursz says.

Everyone clusters around the television for news bulletins. Afterwards, the room is almost silent and the television becomes a grotesque silent movie of comedies, commercials, singing and dancing.

Urge Backing For Dam

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Licking River in Northern Kentucky could be a source of clean drinking water for the Cincinnati area if Cincinnati City Council will support Falmouth's plans for a long delayed dam, promised Falmouth, Ky., Mayor Max Goldberg.

Goldberg, speaking before city fathers Wednesday, promised the city all the clean drinking water it needs plus electricity.

"No matter how much you treat the water from that cesspool—the Ohio River—your drinking water is going to stay polluted," Goldberg said.

He said the $76 million Falmouth Dam, on the drawing boards of the U.S. Corps of Engineers, would provide unlimited drinking water from the Licking River, which has no pollution and no cities or industries south of Falmouth.

"This thing has been studied enough," Goldberg charged. Funds for final studies were cut off for this year, he charged, after Falmouth proposed a hydroelectric system be added to the dam that would create a 90-mile reservoir.

Women Urged To Read Reader's Digest Article

"Any woman who feels confused or frightened by the controversy over who should have mammography will be reassured by the facts presented in an article in March Reader's Digest," Dr. William A. Myers of the Pickaway County Unit of the American Cancer Society said today.

Titled, "What Every Woman Should Know About Breast X-Ray," the article is an interview with breast cancer expert, Benjamin F. Byrd, Jr., M.D., 1976 American Cancer Society President. It was written by Walter S. Ross.

Dr. Myers said that he was calling attention to this article to help dispel the uncertainty and fear created by conflicting views on the safety of mammography which have appeared in the media in recent months. The confusion has caused some women to refuse mammography examinations, he said, even women with obvious signs that could mean breast cancer. These people are endangering their lives, he added.

In the magazine interview Dr. Byrd affirms that nobody knows for sure what the hazards of these low dose x-rays might be. But if there are risks, they are very small and must be weighed against the benefit of detecting a breast tumor very early, when it is most curable.

He also spells out the signs and personal, or family, circumstances which place certain women at higher risk than others of developing this disease. In this special group are women with chronic cystic mastitis; lumps and thickenings in the breast; nipple discharge or other nipple abnormalities; a personal history of breast cancer; a family history of the disease; early onset of menstruation; no history of pregnancy; first full-term pregnancy after age 30. For these women Dr. Byrd believes mammography is vitally important.

The article includes up-to-date statistics: nearly 90,000 women will get breast cancer during the year; over 33,000 will die. It also gives a brief history of this widely discussed breast x-ray technique and its use in special detection centers around the country today. Dr. Myers said that the best hope against breast cancer at the present time is early detection, and quoted Dr. Byrd's interview, "Unless you find and treat breast cancer at the earliest stage, you lose the best chance of cure — you want to pick it up as early as possible. And nothing does this better than mammography."

Ohio Grain Industry Hits EPA Regulations

The Ohio grain industry has charged the federal Environmental Protection Agency with grossly underestimating the ultimate cost of that agency's proposal for further regulating air pollution from new and modified grain elevators, according to Dick Bowers of the Pickaway Grain Co. of Circleville. Bowers further said that the proposal would take six cents per bushel for his firm to conform with this EPA proposal!

Costs quoted by the Ohio Grain, Feed & Fertilizer Association range as high as $200 million dollars for the Ohio industry to install the necessary equipment to prohibit the escape of beeswings (from corn) and grain dust particles and 40 million to operate it annually in this state!

The grain association was particularly concerned with the estimated increased power requirement of about 300 additional horsepower of 150 per cent present power requirements just to meet the pollution needs. All this at a time when energy is in short or at limited supply!

Further, Bowers pointed out that most of the grain beeswings and dust is emitted in rural areas, areas which observe daily clouds of dust rising from tractor operated machinery in the fields, and rural communities which have lived with dusty streets since the days of the early settlers. He said that the particulate matter involved here should not be considered in the same category as hydro-carbons or inorganic emissions. EPA does not even have conclusive data that indicates that these emissions are harmful to health, or for that matter are serious sources of nuisances for our society.

Many farmers will also have to conform with this EPA proposal - all installations with a combined grain leg capacity exceeding 10,000 bushel per hour are affected. Consumers will pay a little more for groceries and farmers lose 8 to 10 cents a bushel when they market their crops!

Chile Apology Disavowed By Government

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is disclaiming an American envoy's apology for U.S. involvement in the overthrow of Salvador Allende's government in Chile.

Yet, as a candidate last year, President Carter himself criticized the Ford administration for helping establish the military dictatorship that now rules Chile.

The administration appeared stunned Tuesday when Brady Tyson, deputy leader of the U.S. delegation to the U.N. Human Rights Commission, issued the apology during a commission debate in Geneva. He said:

"Our delegation would be less than candid and untrue to ourselves and our people if we did not express our profoundest regrets for the role some government officials, agencies and private groups played in the subversion of the previous, democratically elected Chilean government that was overthrown by the coup of Sept. 11, 1973."

But in Washington the State Department disavowed the apology, saying it was a "personal one that was not approved in advance and is not an expression of the administration's views."

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said the President had no prior knowledge of Tyson's remarks. He refused to say how Carter reacted when told of Tyson's remarks.

Overtime Ban Bill Stirs Arguments

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Opposition continued to mount Tuesday night to a controversial bill that permits workers to refuse overtime and mandates other changes in Ohio's labor laws.

Spokesmen for trains and telephone operations are the latest to join manufacturers and other employers against the bill by Sen. Marigene Valiquette, D-11 Toledo.

Roger W. Hoffman of Cleveland, division personnel manager for Ohio Bell Telephone Co. told the Senate Commerce and Labor Committee his firm, like other employers who run businesses seven days a week and 24 hours a day, are opposed. Hoffman said Ohio Bell, if unable to get employees to work during peak periods, would have "unreasonable and disastrous delays in service."

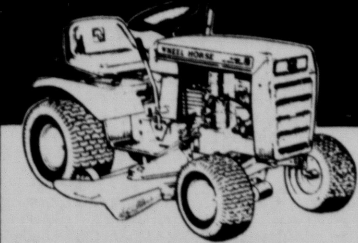

He also objected to other provisions, including specified meal periods, minimum lunch room facilities, and employee rest periods. He said Ohio Bell recognizes "the purpose is to ensure a safe and healthy work environment for employees."

But Hoffman said the Federal Occupational Health and Safety Act sets special standards for the telecommunications industry, and in addition, Ohio Bell's employees are represented "by one very reputable and responsible union...able to protect the employee's interest."

Joseph S. Gill, representing the Ohio Railroad Association, said provisions in the Valiquette bill obviously would be difficult to meet aboard trains.

As an example, he raised a question as to how trains could be run on schedule if requirements were met for lunch and rest periods when a train was en route.

Barkeep Therapy System Tried

FARGO, N.D. (AP) — Got a problem? Don't know where to turn? See a Fargo bartender or hairdresser. They may offer you more than booze and beauty and tell you where you can get help.

Some area bartenders and beauticians — daily recipients of woe and worry from troubled customers — are being groomed to help patrons find ways to deal with life's challenges.

Workshops for barkeeps and beauticians are being held because they "are in unique professions to promote mental health and prevent mental illness," says Lois Quam, publicity director for the Cass County Mental Health Association, a workshop cosponsor.

"Patrons have found that bartenders are willing listeners who don't make damning judgments when they hear of a person's problems," she says.

Seventy beauty college students recently completed a workshop, called "Shampoo, Set and Sympathy," to help guide women who don't know where to turn with their troubles.

"What we're trying to do is train them to be good listeners, and to recognize people in trouble and inform them as to where mental health resources are available" in such problem areas as family, job and alcoholism, says Mrs. Quam. "This is for anybody with problems."

Workshops consist in part of role playing so that participants might learn how to react to a client who, for example, suddenly cries because of a heavy burden, she says.

Mrs. Quam says workshops also stress that troubled people are usually reluctant to seek professional help because they feel it carries a stigma, but will readily confide in a bartender or beautician.

Dr. Will Wells, director of the alcohol program at the Southeast Mental Health and Retardation Center, a cosponsor of the workshops, says drinkers with problems often unload on the bartender, giving the barkeep an opening to respond with helpful suggestions about professional help.

Sooner or later, most everyone wants to talk to the bartender, and familiarity with him breeds some degree of comfort, says Dr. Wells. "With comfort comes openness."

But whether a troubled drinker will respond to the bartender's advice isn't known, Wells says. "We encourage bartenders to call us and tell if he's making a referral."

Bar owner Kenneth Habinger, 44, Casselton, is one of the workshop speakers.

"I'm sure almost every bartender on occasion has had a chance to help somebody out when they have a tough situation to face," says Habinger. "The main thing to remember is that a bartender is not a psychiatrist. He should just try to refer customers to the proper people who will help them."

Search For Simplicity

Even in this highly complex civilization, or perhaps because of it, some people still are packing up a few essential belongings and heading for the woods. They are looking for the simple life, but whether they find it or like it very long once they do only time can tell.

Man does seem to be making life unnecessarily complicated. Within a generation or two a contract between two people has progressed from a simple handshake to a document so filled with whereas it defies explanation by a battery of Philadelphia lawyers.

The entrepreneur finds the complexities, forms, licenses and assorted red tape involved in organizing a business more challenging than the competition. If he succeeds in launching his enterprise, almost immediately he is bombarded by an endless array of surveys, census reports, questionnaires, tax reports and on-site inspections by innumerable agencies.

Individual citizens fare little better. It isn't that some government officials do not try to reduce the onslaught.

President Ford ordered federal departments to cut the number of forms across the board — and they succeeded, only to find more man hours were consumed by the remaining forms because in the meantime they had expanded.

President Carter, in his first fireside chat, not only promised to reduce government regulations but "make sure that those that are written are in plain English for a change." That is an ambition almost beyond belief.

$2 Bill: Sense Or Nonsense?

By PHYLLIS BATTELLE
NEW YORK — On the face of it, it sounds absurd ... a high-priced television commercial campaign to sell the public on the attractions of — money.

Can you hear the pitch? "Here's a product that is more than attractive. It is useful. It is exchangeable and guaranteed to add flair to your wallet. It's drip-dry. Try Money today — you'll be glad you did!"

Not since the early 1800s, when paper money began to be recognized as legal tender in the U.S., has the need for such publicity been so keenly felt as it is today. The reason is that America is now flooded with newly issued two-dollar bills — and they're just not selling.

"The Deuce is a Dud," according to the Wall St. Journal. And the Treasury Department is now considering a $300,000 advertising blitz to try to make people like it.

"I doubt that such a maneuver will work," says my friendly neighborhood Banker's Trust manager, Rudy Grexa, "but publicity is the only way the $2 bill stands a chance. We didn't dream the resistance would be as strong as it is when they issued the bills last spring. We're a small branch, but I ordered $10,000 worth of 'two's,' thinking some of our customers would like to be in on a new thing.

"Well, I can't say we couldn't give 'em away.' We could have given them away, of course. But we couldn't offer them to people who were cashing checks. They'd just hand them back to our tellers and say, 'I'd rather have singles if you don't mind.'"

"At first, we didn't think much about it," Grexa says, "but after a while it became obvious that we had a real loser in the two-dollar bill. Even the collectors didn't take to it much, because too many were issued at once: 400 million of them.

"I guess you'd have to say they're the Edsels of the economy."

No one I've spoken to seems to know why, but two-dollar bills are considered, by the superstitious, to be bad omens. "The hard-luck bill," as Grexa puts it, "from way back. It's strange. The two-dollar bill was retired from the market because it wasn't selling back in 1966. I bought one for each of my kids at the time, because I thought it would have nostalgia value. You wonder why they brought them back now."

The idea, as Treasury Secretary William Simon saw it last April, was to save money: Simon figured that printing costs (about 1.5 cents a bill) could be cut in half if the public gradually replaced their singles with deuces. The average bill wears out in 18 months, and since printing $2s costs no more than printing $1s, the cost-saving factor would be substantial.

Before issuing the $2 bill, a public opinion poll was taken. It showed that 73 per cent of the people polled opposed the idea of the new bill — but 95 per cent said they would accept it as change.

Well, they changed their minds.

Since people don't like to admit that they are superstitious about money (few people will admit openly that the deuce is a jinx), the major reason given for rejecting the bill is that it is too easy to confuse with a $1 or a $20, when you're in a hurry. Shopkeepers claim that they don't like them, not only because their clientele doesn't like them, but because there is no slot in the average drawer of cash registers to handle another denomination. Thus, says the Journal, "Some of the biggest names in retailing don't stock the two-dollar bill for making change." Among them, the Krogers Supermarket chain, Bloomingdale's in New York, Neiman-Marcus in Dallas, and Disneyland in California. Mickey Mouse is a gauge of the public taste.

Even the nation's race tracks, and off-track betting parlors, cannot interest their two-dollar customers in the two-dollar bill.

"Because of inflation," says my banker, "the two makes sense. Treasury is talking of changing the pennies to two-cent pieces — that makes sense, too. But they'd better be careful."

In matters of money, the customer is always right.

Business World

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Among the very basic issues being discussed in business and financial circles with mixed frustration and hope, issues that underlie and affect more specific, immediate concerns, are these:

—Is appreciation of the riskreward principle eroding?

In the past, it was assumed that the individual who assumed responsibility, who took on the greater challenge and therefore accepted the greater risk, should receive the greater rewards if successful.

This spirit, we are told, was vital to the development of the United States, but now a good many critics say it is being smothered in legislation, regulation, taxes, and high interest rates.

Often expressed, the view was restated this week by the chairman of the New York Stock Exchange, William Batten.

"What is needed now," he said, "is for the administration to convert awareness — and campaign promises — into action that will encourage risk-taking."

Batten said he referred specifically to tax reform designed to accelerate capital formation and encouraging investing, such as the double taxing of dividends and the "unrealistic" tax treatment of capital gains.

But in general, he said, the business community faces a tremendous if not impossible task in "trying to educate policymakers, opinion leaders and much of the public itself to the crucial economic lifeline between risk-taking and job formation."

While the business community expresses itself in these words, however, some critics ask if the business community isn't also contributing to what is seen as a loss of the entrepreneurial spirit.

These critics refer to the tendency of some businesses to attempt to reduce risk by controlling markets, by seeking government assistance for especially risky projects and to limit foreign competition, by insisting on cost-plus contracts, and by avoiding innovation as dangerous boat-rocking.

—Can we house the nation properly while continuing the use of traditional mortgage instruments?

The question might seem academic at the moment, because housing markets seem to be growing healthier by the day. But, while the averages and over-all statistics might look good, the breakdown reveals defects.

The major problem seems to be that housing costs and down payment, monthly installments, taxes, interest charges — have put private housing beyond the hopes of many young families.

Older people are complaining too. Having paid off the mortgage, they now find themselves faced with rising operating costs and taxes, and pensions that don't keep pace.

The lenders are griping as well, particularly about being locked into 20 to 30-year commitments at fixed rates of interest when, they observe, nobody is able to tell what rates will be six months from now.

The most commonly suggested solution is the variable rate mortgage, now being used in California and some other areas, the cost of which rises — and conceivably even falls — with prevailing interest rates.

Another mortgage would require small payments early in the contract, when the young homeowner presumably would have relatively small income and big expenditures, and larger payments later on.

For older people the reverse mortgage has been proposed. It would permit the elderly homeowner to use the equity in his or her home as an annuity that would provide a certain sum for life.

The U.S. League of Savings Associations, whose members make up the nation's largest mortgage-lending group, believe that before it can be implemented, current federal and state regulations would have to be updated.

—Which way will interest rates go? Everyone is asking. Involved in this question are issues so fundamental to our economic well-being — plant construction, housing, jobs, prices, the stock market — that it might be the number one economic issue of the moment.

But nobody knows the answer.

Today In History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Thursday, March 10, the 69th day of 1977. There are 296 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1876, the first clear telephone call was made when Alexander Graham Bell summoned his assistant from another room in Bell's house in Boston, saying: "Come here, Watson. I want you."

On this date:
In 1785, Thomas Jefferson was named the U.S. minister to France, succeeding Benjamin Franklin.

In 1848, the U.S. Senate ratified a treaty ending the Mexican War.

In 1864, Ulysses Grant was named Commander in Chief of Union forces in the Civil War.

In 1941, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed the Lendlease Act, providing for transfer of military equipment to the Allies in World War II.

In 1945, U.S. bombers began their first incendiary raids on Japan, setting fire to a vast area of Tokyo.

In 1969, in Memphis, Tenn., James Earl Ray pleaded guilty to the assassination of the civil rights leader, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Ten years ago: It was reported that Joseph Stalin's daughter, Svetlana Stalin, had defected from the Soviet Union and was seeking asylum in a European country.

Five years ago: Premier Lon Nol of Cambodia seized complete power as head of state and nullified the country's nearly completed constitution.

One year ago: Former President Richard M. Nixon said that public disclosure in 1969 of the secret U.S. bombing of Cambodia had forced him to ground the planes and had cost countless American lives.

Today's birthday: Queen Elizabeth's fourth child, Prince Edward, is 13.

Thought for today: Revenge is always the weak pleasure of a little and narrow mind. — Juvenal, Roman lawyer and satirist, about 60 to 140 AD.

"You keep working on my appeal... I'll keep working on my tunnel."

Speaking Of Your Health

by Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Our 16-year-old daughter has had asthma for a number of years. It is kept in fairly good control by drugs. She will be going to college soon. Do you think it advisable to choose a school in an area beneficial to asthma sufferers? We also thought of moving to such a place.

Mrs. L. E., Vt.

Dear Mrs. E.:

A dry climate, without wide swings of temperature, is considered favorable for people who have asthma.

Unfortunately, climate is not always the total answer to the complex problem of asthma. I have known many families who have impulsively uprooted themselves and moved into a new geographic area for this reason, only to find that climate in their cases did not materially affect the asthma.

The total upheaval of the family can lead to much disappointment and heartache.

Choosing a school in an area that is reputed to be beneficial for asthma patients is a good idea. If your daughter is not benefitted or if her asthma becomes worse, by this choice she can always consider another area.

Unlike whole families who decide to make a tremendous move, your daughter's temporary residence will not affect her a great deal. Testing out a new geographic area before uprooting the family is the only way to appraise its advantages for people with asthma, bronchitis or emphysema. There are now many new, exciting drugs on the horizon which are beneficial in preventing asthmatic attacks and controlling them. It is my personal belief that, in a few years, asthma will be a controllable disease.

My doctor always seems to sidetrack answering questions about how long an illness will last. Can't the prognosis as well as the diagnosis, be part of good medical practice? I am in show business and when I have bad laryngitis it's important for me to know how soon I can get back to work.

Mr. H. R., N.Y.

Dear Mr. R.:

It is the wise doctor who does not fall into the trap of prognosticating, or guessing, the exact duration of an illness.

Not only people who are in show business, but almost everyone likes to plan on the time of recovery. Yet all of us in the practice of medicine have learned that there are too many factors that enter into each individual person's recovery from an illness.

With simple laryngitis, recovery depends on the cause, the diligence with which the patient cooperates with the doctor, the elimination of tobacco and the reduction of vocal abuse. Therefore it is almost impossible to assure the patient that on "a week from Wednesday or Thursday" he can go back to work.

Drought Lingers In Western States

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — In spite of late-February storms that brought new hope to the rain-starved West, March is tiptoeing at its gentlest over an area suffering through one of the driest years in history.

An Associated Press survey of drought-affected Western states shows that an increasingly grim picture has not been brightened by sporadic precipitation breaking through a coastal high pressure system that has held off storms for most of the winter.

Ski resorts from California to Utah, for example, experienced a brief mini-boom in business from only the first or second good snowfall this year. But the snow soon melted.

At a few resorts, it was already too late. Hoping for better times next year, they have shut down lifts, laid off standby employees and boarded up lodges.

In water-ratoned Marin County, across the bay from San Francisco, residents who set out dishpans and buckets to catch rain got only 1½ inches of water after four days of on-and-off rainfall.

East of Colorado, another storm system has settled in, but without bringing rain or snow, just wind to pick up the dusty topsoil.

Scattered along with the soil was an undetermined amount of the unsprouted winter wheat seed normally protected by a snow blanket at this time of year.

In Washington, there is a slight chance of a wetter-than-usual spring, but federal officials said that because the first part of the winter was so dry, it would take 285 per cent of normal precipitation before summer to bring conditions back to normal.

In Oregon, long-range snowpack and precipitation forecasts are the worst in 100 years.

In Sacramento, Calif., hydrologists at the National Weather Service's River Forecast Office each week cut their estimates of how much water will run off into California's river and reservoir system.

At the start of February, they predicted only about a third more runoff this summer than in 1924, until now the driest year on record.

But by the beginning of March, chief hydrologist Robert Burnash said the center was predicting — at best — just 86 per cent as much water as in 1924, making this the worst drought in California's history.

A report issued Tuesday by

California's Department of Water Resources said there was little chance of major rainfall in the immediate future since that off-shore high pressure area has shown no sign of dissipating.

A California economist warned on Tuesday that, under the worst of three possible scenarios, more than 250,000 jobs and $6 billion could be lost in California because of the drought.

Even under the best scenario, David Auslam, senior economist with the state Department of Water Resources, told the Governor's Drought Conference in Los Angeles, California will lose about $2.9 billion in income and about 57,000 jobs.

In Washington, D.C., the U.S. Geological Survey said stream flows in February were below normal in 80 per cent of the nation and ground water supplies were being depleted at an alarming rate.

Bill Would End Guard Exemption

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio National Guardsmen would not be exempt from jury duty in the future under a bill approved by the Senate and sent Tuesday to the House.

Sen. Charles L. Butts, D-23 Cleveland, the bill's sponsor, said present law allows guardsmen to be excused for a $5 fee paid to the courts by their guard units—a practice he claims is unfair.

The Clevelander said Adj. Gen. James C. Clem favors the bill but that only a few of the 100 guard units in the state utilize the exemptions. Even then, Butts quoted the guard commander as saying the existing law has been "an embarrassment."

'Children's Hour' Tryouts Scheduled

"The Children's Hour," by Lillian Hellman or better labeled "The Lie," will be Roundtown Players final production of the 1976-77 season.

Ms. Hellman is one of the major playwrights of this century. From "The Children's Hour" to "The Little Foxes" and "Toys in the Attic," her plays have become an enduring part of the American Theatre.

Because of the subject matter of this play, RTP members ask those interested in trying out to be familiar with the play. The title can be deceiving, as it is an adult drama.

The true theme is the curse of gossiping and a whispering campaign, the kind of vicious lying that may easily wreck the lives of innocent persons.

The play has the following roles for casting: nine girls, age 14 thru 18 who are students in an all-girls school; 2 women (mature 30's) the teachers of the school; 3 older women to play the maid, grandmother, and the aunt. Either a young or older man is needed to play the (grocery boy) man, and one male who is in love with one of the teachers.

Girls auditioning for the roles of students are requested to wear white blouse and dark skirt at tryouts.

Tryouts will be March 15 and 16 at 7:30 p.m. in Memorial Hall. Playbooks may be obtained from the director, B. J. Sowers, 474-3991.

Fumes Hurt Attendance At Park

CINCINNATI (AP) — Chemical fumes are causing visitors to run away from Mother Nature at a 1,010-acre county park here.

William Canedy, Hamilton County park district director-secretary, has warned that attendance at the Shawnee Lookout Park may have to be restricted because of chemical fumes from a nearby industry.

An archeology hike in the park about three weeks ago had to be curtailed, Canedy reported, because of "strong fumes which made one person ill."

A total of 65 persons on the hike had to leave the park while holding handkerchiefs over their faces.

The fumes generally settle in valleys of the southwestern Hamilton County park and "it's so serious at times you can hardly see to drive in parts of the park," Canedy said.

Canedy told park commissioners it may become necessary to close parts of the park at times of the day when the fumes are at their worst.

The source of the fumes "evidently" is the Kaiser Agricultural Chemicals plant, Canedy said.

Commissioners instructed Canedy to write the board chairman of Kaiser Agricultural corporate headquarters in Oakland, Calif.

Canedy said that before Monday he had not talked with or written to Kaiser "because I wanted to be sure it (the pollution) was coming from Kaiser before taking the problem to the park board."

Senior Citizens Gain Strength

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio's senior citizens apparently are having their voice heard more strongly in Ohio's legislature, just as they have in Congress in recent years.

Political scientists say it is because longer life trends and a nationwide baby "bust" are combining to make the elderly into a larger and more significant voting bloc.

Drug and utility bills are two areas in which relief could come this year on the state scene, although envisioned state subsidies for gas and electric bills could be jeopardized by fund shortages.

However, hearings got under way in both the Senate and House this week on identical bills that could give not only senior citizens but other segments a break in the purchase of prescription drugs.

Sen. Robert D. Freeman, D-29 Canton, took before the Senate Education and Health Committee Tuesday night his measure allowing pharmacists to substitute less costly generic products for brand name prescription drugs.

Freeman, who said he has been working on his legislation for 18 months, was surprised a week before when a carbon copy of it emerged in the House.

Rep. Edward J. Orlett, D-34 Dayton, introduced that measure which was scheduled to be heard today by the House Judiciary Committee. Identical bills can emerge in separate chambers when the same requests are submitted to the billdrafting Legislative Service Commission.

Freeman quoted the welfare department as saying his bill could result in a savings in Ohio of $1 million to $5 million a year, since drugs can vary widely in price from one pharmacy to another.

He said the bill permits the pharmacist to select a less costly drug than the one prescribed if the doctor permitted the druggist to select an alternative product and pass the savings to the customer.

The Stark County lawmaker gave assurances that the legislation "will do nothing to disrupt the patient-doctor-pharmacist relationship."

He said once the public is educated about the measure "the savings to those on fixed incomes and the elderly who depend on medication to survive is incalculable."

Meanwhile, hearings are continuing in the House on a measure by Rep. Dennis E. Eckart, D-18 Euclid, which would have the state pick up 25 per cent of the gas and electric bills of Ohioans 65 and over, during the heating season November through April. It also would include help for disabled Ohioans.

Eckart's bill, however, is predicated upon the ability of the finance committees in the legislature to come up with $40 million to $60 million the subsidy package would cost.

At the same time, efforts are under way in the legislature to increase the income limitation to qualify for the homestead property tax exemption from $10,000 to $15,000 a year. The property tax break currently is given to homeowners 65 and over who occupy their own homestead.

Dear Abby:

By Abigail Van Buren

Lifer Wants To Donate Kidney

DEAR ABBY: I am a 36-year-old man who is in Rutland, Vt., doing 30 years to life for second degree murder. I killed a 15-year-old girl. No reason. I just went off my rocker.

Now the problem: I read in your column that a lot of people need kidneys. I know that kidneys have been transplanted successfully, and I want you to put me in touch with someone who needs one so I can donate one of mine. I don't mean after I'm dead. I mean right now. I know a person can live with only one kidney so if I could give one of mine now maybe I could sleep better.

I realize I can't bring back that poor little girl whose life I took, but I could give some other person life. It won't balance the scales, but it would give some meaning to my life, which is practically useless now.

This letter was not written in haste. I've thought about it for a long time. I'm not very religious, but God knows this is a sincere request. Can you help me get it granted, Abby?

GEORGE H.

DEAR GEORGE: I don't know the laws concerning such a donation, but if you're sincere (and I believe you are) tell the chaplain of the correctional institution what you've told me, and he will advise you. God bless.

DEAR ABBY: A friend has asked me to play "Dear Abby" and mediate a fuss between her and her husband, and I honestly don't know what to tell her. It seems that her husband is bugged because she is always doing knitting, needlepoint or some kind of handiwork when they're watching TV or just visiting.

He says she has all day to do whatever she wants, and when he comes home, she should give him her undivided attention. He wants her to look at him while they're conversing.

She says she can hear every word he says, and she DOES look at him almost constantly, so he has no legitimate beef.

I can see his point, Abby, but I can also see hers. Do you think he has the right to ask her to quit doing needlework in his face? And should she just to please him?

IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR IN: He hasn't the right to ask her to quit. Handiwork for many (men as well as women) is therapeutic. It's relaxing and relieves tension. Tell her I said she could stick to her needlework

-but look up a little more.

DEAR ABBY: I have a small but annoying problem I need help with. It seems that whenever I telephone a friend I haven't spoken to for some time, his or her first words are something like, "Well, I don't believe I am actually hearing from you," or, "My goodness, I thought you dropped off the edge of the earth, etc. . . ." (I'm sure you get the idea, Abby.)

It irks me to be put down with such a negative reception, when I have finally taken the initiative and called someone, as though it were MY obligation to do so.

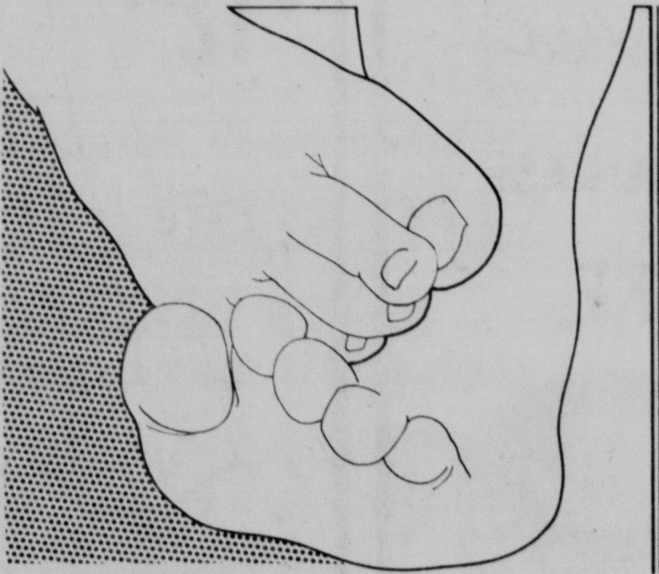

It's the same kind of guilt some elderly folks or shut-ins lay on those who haven't been around to see them for a while. In other words, how does one cope with people who make you feel guilty?

IRKED

DEAR IRKED: No one can make you feel "guilty" unless you've earned the guilt. (Irritated, put down and even outraged perhaps, but not guilty.) There's no way to prevent others from needing you. Develop a tougher side.

Man Jailed After Talk With Carter

WARRENSVILLE HEIGHTS, Ohio (AP) — Armed only with a good luck wish from President Carter, surrendered hostage-taker Cory Moore, 25, today was in county jail awaiting grand jury action on two preliminary kidnaping charges resulting from his two-day, siege at City Hall here.

Moore was jailed late Wednesday after receiving a telephone call from Carter which Secret Service agents at both ends of the special phone line would not allow anyone to monitor.

But as Moore was being whisked away to the Cuyahoga County Jail in Cleveland for detention in a cell in lieu of bonds totaling $200,000, he told reporters, "He (Carter) wished me luck."

The unemployed ex-Marine surrendered peacefully Wednesday morning as he said he would at the end of a Carter White House news conference which covered several topics including Moore.

Carter admitted that promising to talk to Moore even with the stipulation that he first release the second of two hostages might be setting a "dangerous precedent."

But moments after Carter completed the news conference—which Moore was watching on a television he had swapped earlier in the siege for 17-year-old hostage Shelley Kiggins—Moore gave remaining hostage Det. Leo Keglavic, 49, the two handguns he used to keep Keglavic's fellow officers at bay for 45 hours and submitted himself to arrest.

Magicians' Machinery Developed By Man

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — George Kirkendall is a magician with machinery. Everything he makes works like magic.

Kirkendall, 44, of suburban Upper Arlington, manufactures small metal precision devices used by magicians.

He's been at it for 12 years and says he grosses about $20,000 annually from sales to clients worldwide. He makes 40 different items that magicians use in performing their tricks. The items sell for $15 to $200.

Kirkendall was formerly a sales engineer for Taylor Instruments Co., of Rochester, N.Y., which makes industrial precision instruments.

He says grinding out precision metal equipment for magicians is a vanishing art.

One of his trick gadgets is a metallic version of the old shell game.

Another is a reel that can be concealed and used to wind string attached to items which magicians make vanish or appear to float through the air.

"Many of the things I make are never seen by the public," Kirkendall said.

His shop is in the basement of his home and he said business has been getting better in the last four years. He is also secretary of the Magic Hobby Club of Ohio, which he says has 52 members and is the oldest magic club in the United States.

Kirkendall also restores and repairs antique magic devices.

For the past year he has been restoring a mechanical peacock, made sometime before 1800. It was once used by Robert Houdin, world known French magician who died in 1871.

When it works, the peacock walks, stops, spreads its tail feathers, and walks on.

Government Rule By Bureaucrats Hit

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A bipartisan effort has started in the legislature to end government rule by "unelected officials."

Sponsors urged approval Tuesday night of a bill by Rep. Thomas P. Gilmartin, D-51 Youngstown, which would let the legislature reassert itself over appointed agencies devising rules which have virtually the force of law.

Joining Gilmartin on the legislation was Rep. William G. Batchelder, R-93 Medina, a conservative who supported Ronald Reagan is Ohio's presidential primary last year.

They told the House Governmental Affairs Committee it should approve the measure—vetoed last session by Republican Gov. James A. Rhodes—which gives the legislature the authority to approve or reject the rules of the approximately 300 state agencies appointed by the governor.

Under the existing administrative procedures law, the agencies are empowered to adopt rules which go into effect only after public hearings and an appeals process that may or may not cause them to be changed.

Gilmartin, who saw his bill die the last time after getting the House but not the Senate to override the governor, told the committee the General Assembly has allowed its authority to give way over the years to bureaucrats. "The legislature must control the laws of this state," he said.

Batchelder added that in only six years, the number of rules promulgated by federal agencies has grown from 20,000 pages to 60,000 pages. He said he fears "Ohio is having a similar explosion."

The bill also was supported by the Ohio Association of Realtors whose spokesman, Keith Shoemaker, said his group is hit constantly with complaints from members about "unelected officials governing them."

Gilmartin declined to speculate on the fate of his bill in the Senate this year, if it reaches that chamber. "I hope our fate in the Senate this year will be better," he said.

FMC Plant Shut Down

SOUTH CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — The FMC Corp. began shutting down its factory here after a federal judge ordered a halt to production and discharge of a chemical that has turned up in the drinking water supplies of Ohio River communities.

The decision to temporarily close the plant, reached Wednesday by U.S. District Judge Charles Haden in Parkersburg, would affect an estimated 1,200 employees, said Bill Currey, an FMC spokesman.

In issuing a 10-day temporary restraining order, Haden indicated he was more worried about the 1.28 million persons who rely on the river for their drinking water.

"I can't ignore that," he said, noting that he had to balance the interests of the FMC employees with the potential public health hazard.

Haden ordered the firm to stop production of carbon tetrachloride, a substance that has been spilled into the Kanawha River and traveled downstream to the Ohio on numerous occasions. He said FMC could place whatever amounts of the chemical it already had on hand in its storage tanks.

The Environmental Protection Agency, which sought the restraining order and a preliminary injunction, claimed the plant had a "repeated history of carbon tetrachloride spills," including 20 such spills in the past two years.

The earliest Americans were Homo sapiens, the same species as modern men and women, not the more primitive peoples whose remains have been found in Africa, Asia, and Europe, according to National Geographic.

try "Monkey Face," a humorous story about a Monkey who draws a picture of his mother. On the way home from school, various friends offer suggestions for improving the portrait: Giraffe thinks the neck should be longer, Elephant votes for a larger nose, etc. By the time Monkey gets home to Mother, the picture is much altered, to say the least!

"Could Be Worse!," also a picture book, is about two children who grow tired of Grandpa's pat answer to any problems that befall them. The tables are turned when the book concludes with a droll and very funny ending.

In our Easy Reader section look for "Night Noises and Other Mole and Troll Stories." Here, Mole and Troll come back for four adventures in friendship.

Attractively illustrated with photographs is "Hanging On: How Animals Carry Their Young." The book is fun for the pictures alone, but the text adds a brief description of the various ways different animals transport their children.

See you Saturday if not before!

Ohio Retail Sales Drop In January

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Retail sales in Ohio declined 33 per cent, or 7 per cent after seasonal adjustment, from December to January, the first recorded drop for that period since 1972, according to the Center for Business Research.

The decrease, from December's record-setting sales, also showed a one per cent decline from the first month of 1976, the first January-to-January decrease since 1970, the center said. January's severe cold and energy shortages brought increased sales in some areas, despite the overall decline.

Food sales increased 2 to 7 per cent above the year-ago level as Ohioans stockpiled food supplies. A 14 per cent sales increase in the "other automotive" line reflected the gearing up of cars with tires, batteries and other parts for the severe temperatures, the center reported.

The abnormally cold weather also caused a 23 per cent increase over last year in the sale of heating, plumbing and electrical supplies, the center said. And sales of durables such as snow-handling equipment increased hardware store sales where stocks were available.

The largest increase, 59 per cent, occurred in sales of supplementary heating fuels, the center said.

Sales in January dropped from a year ago in all 11 of the city-county areas indexed by the center, but all other areas of Ohio increased fractionally.

January retail sales compared with the same month a year ago were: Akron, down 6 per cent; Canton, down 7; Chillicothe, down 3; Cincinnati, down 7; Cleveland, down 2; Columbus, down 2; Dayton, down 7; Hamilton-Middletown, down 3; Portsmouth, down 2; Toledo, down 2; Youngstown, down 10.

Drugs Seen Link In 11 Murders

CINCINNATI (AP) — Police from Ohio and Kentucky were meeting today to look for a common denominator—possibly narcotics—in the murders of 11 young women since 1975.

Jack Leach, chief investigator for Hamilton County Coroner Frank Cleveland, who arranged the meeting, confirmed that a May 1976 seizure of a boat containing 9½ tons of marijuana in Mississippi might be a possible link. "One of our purposes is to see if this could be, in fact, a common tie,"

Leach said. But Leach said the primary purpose of the meeting is to share investigation material on all the slayings to determine if there are common threads that might link them together.

All the bodies were found in rural areas, most were nude or partially nude. Leach said the original estimate of 16 was reduced to 11 when five were eliminated through being solved or having no apparent similarity. Cleveland's office conducted all the autopsies on a cooperative basis.

Cleveland said two of the 11 have been solved but were included in the probe because of similarities to the other nine cases.

Kentucky State police, the Ohio Bureau of Criminal Investigation and Cincinnati police homicide squad were invited. Other authorities and the numbers of killings under investigation in their districts are: Hamilton County, three; Clermont County, two; and one each in Butler, Warren and Clinton counties.

Leach said he would neither confirm nor deny the list of the victims published Wednesday by The Cincinnati Enquirer.

The list included: Hamilton County: Mary Ruth Hopkins, 21, Cincinnati, June 30, 1976; Linda Dyer, 15, Cincinnati, Aug. 24, 1976; Dorothy Sullivan, 18, Cincinnati, Aug. 28, Earl Elder, Cincinnati, was convicted in the Sullivan case and sentenced to 25 years.

Kentucky: Susan Gorman, 19, Cincinnati, Dec. 3, 1975. Carol Sue Klaber, 16, Fort Wright, June 5, 1976 and an unidentified woman found April 17, 1976 in Grant County. John Boyd, 49, Middletown, a mental patient, was convicted for the Gorman slaying.

Clermont County: Linda Kay Harmon, 17, Forestville, Sept. 2, 1975; Nancy Grigsby, 23, Witamsville, May 9, 1976.

Clermont County: Cora Ellen Lurham, also known as Tanya Ellen King, 27, Cincinnati, June 20.

Butler County: Victoria Hinchey, 24, Cincinnati, Oct. 31, 1976.

Clinton County: Elaina Bear, 15, Cincinnati, Feb. 28, 1977.

Leach said Montgomery County authorities asked to attend the meeting as observers.

The Enquirer reported many of several victims knew each other and some of those arrested in the Mississippi narcotics seizure.

Heart Transplants Less Than Hoped

CINCINNATI (AP) — The heart transplant proved to be an experiment where expectations exceeded the result, according to Dr. Michael DeBakey, one of the pioneers in heart surgery.

"It was accepted more in the public area than it ever was in the scientific area," Dr. DeBakey told a press conference here Wednesday.

The head of the department of surgery at the Baylor College of Medicine said the method was "never considered by medical authorities to be the answer to heart disease."

"It was an experiment by a number of people who felt it could be done. The only way we could determine if it could be done in humans was to do it in humans," said DeBakey, who performed the last of his 12 transplants five years ago.

"The justification was that some kinds of heart diseases were terminal in a very short time and the transplant might extend the life expectancy."

"With the proper safeguards we thought we might be able to try it, but the experiment didn't appear sufficiently useful to continue."

None of the recipients of heart transplants he operated on is still alive, DeBakey said.

Reports that Dr. Christian Barnard—the pioneer of the heart transplant—planned to use baboon hearts as an auxiliary heart to support the original diseased heart were treated with skepticism by DeBakey.

"In general, transplants from another species produce more violent reactions than those of the same species," he said.

He predicted that by the end of the century he had hopes that an artificial heart could be created which would be able to work alone.

Bits Of Bone Prove Puzzling

MEDINA, Ohio (AP) — Medina County authorities said Wednesday the bones and teeth found near a Hinckley Lake boathouse were determined to be of human origin, but Cuyahoga County authorities disagreed.

A Cuyahoga County official who declined identification said the remains appeared to be those of a dog.

A bit of bone said to be part of a skull was given to a Case Western Reserve University anthropologist for further study.

Universities Seek Coal Project

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Representatives of Ohio University have plugged their campus as the ideal site for a research center to find wider uses for the state's high sulfur coal.

President Charles J. Ping, G. Kenner Bush, OU trustee and editor and publisher of the Athens

Messenger, and Robert L. Savage, chemical engineering professor, testified Wednesday before a House subcommittee.

The panel is considering a bill by Rep. Arthur Bowers, D-98 Steubenville, which increases the severance tax on coal by two cents a ton to provide $1 million a year for the envisioned center.

Bowers provides in his bill that the facility would be established on the Athens campus, but the university now finds itself in heated competition with Ohio State University in Columbus.

The subcommittee, headed by Rep. Irene B. Smart, D-49 Canton, is expected to visit the Ohio State campus next week as debate over site selection continues.

Donald D. Glower, dean of the OSU College of Engineering, and other officials of that institution urged the subcommittee last week to choose Columbus, saying OSU already is involved in extensive research on coal.

However, Ping and the other Ohio University spokesmen said Wednesday that a major reason to locate the center there is its proximity to Ohio's coal producing region. "There are deep mines and surface mines within minutes of the campus," the president said.

He also said the OU also has extensive research projects under way, although none involve coal, and showed it can move "timely and effectively" under a legislative mandate. He cited the new OU College of Osteopathic Medicine as an example.

Bush also stressed the proximity of the coal region in a state that leads the nation in consumption of coal and ranks as its fifth largest producers. Thousands of jobs in Ohio's Appalachia counties depend on coal, he said.

Bush said it is obvious that industry in Ohio will use coal one way or the other. "If they don't use ours, they'll use someone else's," he said, adding that if ways are not found to use Ohio's coal "we are going to put many of our miners on unemployment."

Man Buys Home Back At Auction

LORAIN, Ohio (AP) — Fred Zimmerman paid $39,100 Wednesday to buy his own home in a sheriff's sale.

The 32-year-old Lorain man's two-year-old nightmare began when the contractor didn't pay the subcontractors. Zimmerman was then forced to give up the house for sale after subcontractors filed $100,000 in liens, later reduced by a court to $20,000. But the liens prevented Zimmerman from getting title to his unfinished four-bedroom home.

Zimmerman said he borrowed $16,000 and paid a contractor to start building the house. The contractor, however, never paid the subcontractors, who then went to court to get their money.

The contractor, Michael Nobotny, was recently released on probation after serving time in prison for a grand theft conviction in connection with his financially troubled building operation.

Zimmerman said he spent his life savings in his bid Wednesday morning in a last-ditch effort to save his home.

The pharmaceutical salesman and former Atlanta Falcons linebacker figures he will have spent about $79,700 when his home is completed. The money from the sheriff's sale will go to the Cuyahoga Savings and Loan to pay the construction mortgage in Nobotny's name, court costs and interest on the original loan.

Despite his public appeal last week that no one bid against him, saying, "Who would add to the woes of people in this situation," Zimmerman outbid Cuyahoga Savings and Loan by $100.

Judge Cline Speaks To VFW Members

Twelve persons were present at the monthly meeting of the Pickaway County Volunteers for Youth Wednesday evening at the home of Diane Berger.

Probate Court Judge Guy Cline was the guest for the evening. He discussed with members the various phases of the Juvenile Court system and how the volunteer can best fit in while working with a young person on probation.

One subject discussed in depth concerned school truancy and how to deal with it outside the Juvenile Court system. Judge Cline explained that area schools deal with the truancy situation and some of the steps he has and is currently taking with this growing problem.

The volunteers were introduced to the new probation officer, Brent Johnson.

One final suggestion concerning the possibility of an emergency shelter was made by the Probation Department. This concerns youths, 15 years of age and under, who are possibly in violation of the law or neglected, and cannot be placed in a jail. They would then be placed in a volunteers home overnight or for the weekend until their court appearance or their parents are located.

Again, a plea was made for more volunteers, especially in the county. Persons wishing further information on becoming a volunteer should contact Ramona Edman at 474-7927 or call Diane Berger at 474-6900.

Trials Held In Kidnap Of Niehous

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — President Carlos Andres Perez has ordered that military trial continue for four men, including two Venezuelan congressmen, accused of participation in the year-old kidnaping of American glass company executive William F. Niehous.

The four men, arrested last August, are Congressman Salom Meza, a member of the leftist Peoples Electoral Movement, Congressman Fortunato Herrera, an independent, David Nieves and Ivan Padilla.

They are accused of military rebellion in the case, in which armed men, some dressed in military uniforms, drugged and abducted Niehous, 46, of Toledo, Ohio, from his suburban Caracas home Feb. 27, 1976.

Although authorities have said all participants in the kidnap case have been either arrested or identified, no trace has been reported of Niehous, who managed Venezuelan operations for the Toledo-based Owens-Illinois Glass manufacturing group.

Authorities have not revealed details of the alleged involvement of the four men in the kidnaping.

Unofficial sources have indicated Herrera attempted to serve as a contact between the kidnapers and Owens-Illinois, while Nieves and Padilla were captured following an abortive attempt to collect an advance payment on a $3.4 million ransom demand.

Judge Ammer Sentences Two Men To Reformatory

Two men were sentenced to terms in the Mansfield Reformatory Wednesday by Common Pleas Court Judge William Ammer.

Paul Daniels, 27, Columbus, was given a 4 to 25 year term after he pled guilty to a charge of aggravated burglary.

Authorities apparently had problems locating Daniels, who appeared on a Bill of Information after waiving a Grand Jury hearing.

He was charged Feb. 28, 1975, with entering a home in the west-central part of the county with the intent to commit a theft offense.

Tyler L. Burns, 19, Columbus, was sentenced to concurrent 6 month to 5 year terms in the Mansfield Reformatory after he pled guilty March 2 to breaking and entering and theft of drugs.

He was charged Nov. 1 with breaking into a local doctor's office and unlawfully obtaining drugs.

Trial dates were set on three men, who entered not guilty pleas to a variety of charges.

Trial for Richard Allen Hooks, Williamsport, has been set for April 18, and Judge Ammer set bond at $20,000 plus recognizance.

Hooks, who was indicted Feb. 27, 1976, turned himself into Pickaway County Sheriff Dwight Radcliff March 9.

Groucho Marx Having Good Time

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Groucho Marx may be in the hospital recuperating from hip surgery but the 86-year-old comedian is reported to be having a wonderful time, a family spokesman said. And some of the nurses at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center are joining in by wearing Groucho Marx T-shirts.

Marx entered the hospital Friday for surgery to insert a new right hip joint. Pains in his leg, which troubled him during a dinner with actor Elliott Gould, have subsided since the surgery to correct a floating fracture of the hip.

"I'll do anything to miss my cook's food," Marx quipped after entering the hospital, the spokesman said Wednesday.

Urge Registration Of Watercraft

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — With the advent of spring, the Department of Natural Resources urges boaters to register their watercraft early.

According to Norv Hall, chief of DNR's watercraft division, the department is working to eliminate some of the red tape involving registering boats.

DNR is preparing legislation which will allow boaters to renew their registrations by mail every three years. The new legislation also eliminates the registration of outboard motors.

He is charged with arson and three counts of receiving stolen property.

He was charged Jan. 10, 1976, with intentionally setting fire to a pick-up truck, and Jan. 28, Feb. 10, and Feb. 13, with receiving hogs, lights, and tools which he knew or should have known were stolen.

Trial date for Charles Albert Foster, 11610 Poplar St., Ashville, will be April 25.

Foster, indicted by the Grand Jury Feb. 18, is charged with perjury. According to the indictment, Foster knowingly made a false statement under oath during an official proceeding in Municipal Court Dec. 8.

Trial date for Fred Seaton Jr., Stoutsville, will be April 29. Bond was set at $5,000 after Seaton pled not guilty to charges of receiving stolen property and failure to appear on a recognizance bond.

He was indicted by the Grand Jury Jan. 21 for receiving a stereo which he knew or should have known was stolen.

Judge Ammer suspended a prison term he imposed on a local man and placed him on probation for three years.

Kevin Lee Pennington, 2854 Walnut Creek Pike, was given probation after he was sentenced to a 6 month to 5 year term in the Mansfield Reformatory on a charge of receiving stolen property.

He was charged Dec. 24 with receiving a television set, gun, and radio which he knew or should have known were stolen.

In ordering probation, Judge Ammer ruled that Pennington must seek necessary counseling.

Judge Ammer also denied a motion for shock probation filed by Bruce W. London, Chillicothe.

London, who was found guilty by a jury Sept. 20 on three counts of grand theft and one count of vandalism, was sentenced to four concurrent terms of from one to 5 years in the Ohio Penitentiary.

In denying the shock motion, Judge Ammer noted that London had a prior theft offense in Ross County in 1972, and that he absconded during the trial and was apprehended two days later in Colorado.

Terrorist Actions Condemned

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — The president of the American-Arab Relations Committee has condemned the action of terrorists who invaded a Jewish organization and two other buildings in Washington on Wednesday and held scores of hostages.

Dr. M.T. Mehdi said the invasions, apparently by members of the Hanafi Moslem sect, "violate the spirit of Islam."

In a telegram to the B'nai B'rith headquarters in New York, Mehdi offered to go to Washington today to try to help secure the release of more than 100 hostages being held by riflemen in the organization's offices.

Earlier, Mehdi, who is touring the Midwest, told a news conference President Carter is "beginning to eat his words about the Arab embargo."

"If you'll notice his stand as a candidate and those as President aren't the same," Mehdi said. "Before he made threats to impose the embargo, now he's saying that he won't take any steps to prevent American companies from doing business with the Arabs."

Mehdi said Carter was forced to back down from his position, "otherwise he will force America out of a growing Asian market."

Mehdi cautioned that the future of America is linked to Asia, "a new world frontier for humanity." He said the Asian market will generate more than $200 billion over the next five years and America could be forced out of the trade market by supporting the Israeli regime.

Mehdi's stop in Dayton was one of four scheduled on a tour through the Midwest to meet with Arab-American leaders and American Arabists to organize their efforts to influence President Carter's foreign policy on the Palestinian-Israeli situation.

Other cities on his tour include College Park and Pittsburgh, Pa., and Indianapolis.

Mort Sahl Drops Lawsuit Plans

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — He's not exactly burying the hatchet, but comedian Mort Sahl says he's giving up the idea of a lawsuit against entertainer Frank Sinatra.

"I'm trying to give the courts a better press," Sahl said in a telephone interview Wednesday.

Sinatra sued Sahl in Los Angeles Superior Court in 1974, claiming Sahl had only paid off half of a $20,000 loan made 10 years earlier.

The suit was filed a month after Sahl had commented on Sinatra's attacks on a Hollywood gossip columnist.

Sahl's attorney, Ronald H. Rouda, said that Sahl was considering a countersuit. But Sinatra's case was dismissed when he refused to give a deposition last January.

Asked on Wednesday if he plans to try to reactivate his friendship with Sinatra, Sahl said, "Not especially."

Marion Steinhauer and his family at Winter Haven and with daughter Peg and her husband Paul Fulton at Ft. Lauderdale. Peg is slowly recovering from recent open heart surgery. One of the really nice things to happen while Emma was in Florida was the promotion of Marion to vice president and manager of the Cypress Gardens office of the Barnett Banks. Marion began his banking career several years ago here in our village at the former Farmers National Bank which is now a branch office of the First National Bank of Circleville. The Steinhauers have been in Florida for nearly ten years. Emma also spent time with other friends that she and her late husband Harry had known in past years when they wintered in Florida. Another highlight of her winter hiatus was to attend the Florida Citrus Showcase, a festival type affair, where she had the opportunity to see and meet Phyllis Diller.

Execution Date Set For Springfield Man

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A May 9 execution day has been set by the Supreme Court for a Springfield man convicted of murder largely on the basis of fingerprints found near the scene of a shooting death.

In a 5-2 decision Wednesday, the court upheld the murder, aggravated robbery and burglary conviction of George W. Miller, implicated in the shooting death of a department store maintenance man.

Police found Shirley Craycraft lying in the aisle of the Twin Fair Store with gunshot wounds in the head and neck shortly before 3 a.m. on Aug. 13, 1975.

Near the scene they found a paper sack filled with merchandise from the store and at the rear entrance they found a hacksaw and its carton. All bore the accused man's fingerprints.

But it was never established that the hacksaw was used to force open the locks, which had been jarred loose by some device. And no murder weapon or stolen goods were found in Miller's possession.

Jeep Strike Continues

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

American Motors Corp. officials say there are no immediate plans to reopen contract negotiations with a striking United Auto Workers local at the firm's Toledo Jeep plant.

"We negotiated a contract in good faith.... The whole matter rests in the union's hands," a company spokesman said Wednesday.

The 4,600-member UAW Local 12 rejected the proposed pact by a 130-vote margin on Monday. The old contract, which expired Jan. 31, had been extended on a day-to-day basis before the local struck Tuesday.

Union officials could not be reached for comment, but union members apparently were dissatisfied with the three-year wage package which provided for a 41-cent increase in the first year.

Meanwhile, UAW strikes at Chrysler Corp. and General Motors Corp. plants continued Wednesday.

And last-minute bargaining sessions between the UAW and officials at GM's Janesville, Wis. assembly plant reportedly were stalled by disagreements over grievance procedures, job assignments, department transfers and safety regulations.

The court majority said the fingerprints were "sufficient proof of his identity to sustain his conviction where the circumstances show that such prints, found at the scene of the crime, could only have been impressed at the time of the commission of the crime."

Miller worked at the store for one month in 1972, according to testimony given by the store manager.

More than 20 individuals have been given dates with the electric chair since the high court began its review of death row cases last November.

Dissenting justices William B. Brown and Paul Brown said the majority opinion was based on circumstantial evidence that did not exclude "every reasonable hypothesis except that of guilt."

Writing for the minority, William B. Brown noted that the paper sack, the hacksaw and its cardboard package, which also showed Miller's fingerprints, were accessible to any person who shopped in the store.

William Brown said the evidence could link Miller to an overnight robbery, or burglary of which he was also convicted, but asserted it did "not directly tie Miller to the murder."

Sanitarians Face Licensing

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Sanitarians, hired by local government agencies to inspect restaurants and other places that serve food, would have to be licensed, under a bill given last week 60-33 support by the House.

Sponsored by Rep. Frederick H. Deering, D-84 Monroeville, it aims at preventing untrained individuals from working in the field of environmental health.

But freshman Rep. Robert D. Corbin, R-38 Dayton, called creation of another agency Wednesday an "exercise in futility." He said he has attended a recent committee hearing considering a Democratic-sponsored bill that would eliminate 187 existing boards, commissions and bureaus.

Baseball's Rose, Tiant Still Among Unsigned

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mark Fidrych picked up where he left off last season, pitching three scoreless innings for the Detroit Tigers in a 5-4 exhibition opener against the Boston Red Sox, but there was discontent at Cincinnati's camp as the Reds' 10-time All-Star third baseman Pete Rose refused to sign his contract.

In the Detroit-Boston game Wednesday at Winter Haven, Fla., Jason Thompson, Ben Oglivie and Mickey Stanley cracked home runs for the Tigers. Fidrych, the American League's Rookie of the Year who won 19 games last year, gave up only three hits in three innings.

At Tampa, Fla., Rose said he wouldn't sign, and decried what he called a lack of appreciation by the Reds for his dedication. He said he might play out his option because of the bitter salary dispute.

"Why are they negotiating on the date of my birth rather than on my batting average?" said the 36-year-old Rose, who has batted .300 in 11 of his last 12 years.

Rose has played 2,184 games in his 17-year career with the Reds' organization.

And there was just as much bitterness in Boston, where pitching ace Luis Tiant said he might go back to Mexico after failing to come to terms with the Red Sox on his demand for an extension of his contract and a no-cut clause.

"The way I'm feeling right now is I'll go home," he said. "I've had enough."

His contract runs through the 1977 season and he wants it stretched another year. He had asked for a three-year contract but said he had negotiated most recently for just two.

Canadiens, Leafs Tie

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hands are not exactly reaching for the panic button, but there is an element of concern among the Montreal Canadiens ... now that they are winless in two whole games.

"A loss and a tie hasn't happened to us in another instance," said Montreal goalie Ken Dryden after the Toronto Maple Leafs came back twice for a 2-2 deadlock with the Canadiens Wednesday night.

"We're lacking a little of our zip right now," said veteran Montreal right wing Jim Roberts. "We came off the winning streak with the loss to Buffalo and it's taking us a little while to get back."

The loss to Buffalo Sunday night ended the Canadiens' near-record unbeaten string at 21 games — the longest in the National Hockey League this season. But now Montreal is staggering through one of its worst slumps of the season; only once had they been winless in two games.

"It's a little upsetting," said Dryden. Meanwhile, the New York Rangers defeated the Minnesota North Stars 6-4, the New York Islanders beat the Atlanta Flames 6-2, the Buffalo Sabres downed the Detroit Red Wings 6-3, the Vancouver Canucks bested the Washington Capitals 5-2, and the Pittsburgh Penguins topped the Colorado Rockies 3-0.

Southwest Ohio Cage Stars Selected

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Coach Ron Holtrey and his star Lebanon player, Jim Rhoden, have won The Associated Press' main honors this season in Ohio Southwestern District high school basketball.

Holtrey guided Lebanon to 18 straight triumphs this season and a district panel of sports writers tapped him for the Southwestern Class AAA Coach of the Year crown.

Rhoden, a 6-foot-6 senior who averaged 20.7 points and 13 rebounds, earned the area AAA Player of the Year honors. Rhoden, highly sought by colleges, led Lebanon to a 39-1 record going into this year's tournaments.

Dave McCurdy, a 6-1 Springfield Catholic star with 22 points and 12 rebounds per contest, and 6-1 Carlisle senior Eddie Crowe, hitting 22 points a game, shared the Southwestern Class AA Player of the Year award.

Bob Velton of Reading, with no starters taller than 6-2, guided his team to a 15-3 record and the Hamilton County National championship. His lineup was an untested senior, two juniors and two sophomores. That earned him area AA Coach of the Year.

The Class A district honors went to 6-1 Arcanum senior Kevin O'Dell, 23.2 points per game, as the No. 1 player and Coach Jack Young, who is turning New Miami's program around. Young was 4-15 in his first season and 10-8 this time in his second try.

Circleville, Teays Valley Ready For Sectional Fight

Both Circleville Coach Joy O'Brien and Teays Valley Coach Angie Rinehart expect nothing but the best from their cagers when the Tigers and the Vikings square off tonight on the opening round of the Class AA Sectional Tournament at Pickerington.

The winner of the 7 p.m. contest will battle the winner of the West Jefferson-London contest in the tourney finals Saturday night.

Both teams are winners of their respective cage leagues. Circleville, after dropping its opening game of the season to the Vikings, have won 13 straight and walked off with the South Central Ohio League crown.

And Teays Valley, which lost two games all year, finished as co-champions of the Metro League.

"With both teams having extremely fine seasons, we expect a hard-played game," said Coach O'Brien. "We have improved tremendously since our season opener and expect to give them a better game."

"Not only is this a tournament game, but it will also be another fine county rivalry," she said.

Coach Rinehart said her players are looking forward to the battle with the Tigers.

"Most of the teams we've played this year have one or two key players. But I think our two squads play very well as teams," she said.

Fans looking for a key to the game should pay attention to the backboards, according to Coach Rinehart.

Circleville's board strength comes from 6-foot senior Sue Stevenson, 5-11 junior Sue Frericks, and 5-8 junior Natalie Martin.

The Vikes will counter with 5-7 senior Perri Martin, 5-8 junior Florie Mesner, 5-8 senior Suzy Jones, and 5-7 sophomore Shelley Marion.

While the Vikes will be giving up some inches, Coach Rinehart has been working on variations of her offense and defense to give maximum rebounding potential at all times.

Look for good, strong zone defenses from both teams, and some fast-paced presses.

Circleville will start Sue Frericks, Sue Stevenson, and Natalie Martin around the basket and Sue Radcliff and Kathy Fanale on the perimeter. Wanda Boyd and Michelle Nolan are Coach O'Brien's usual first choices off the bench.

Coach Rinehart remains undecided about her starting players. Prime candidates are Debbie Baxter, Perri Martin, Rita Slone, Suzy Jones, Florie Mesner, Shelley Marion, and P.J. Stiles.

"We have worked hard for the last week," O'Brien said, "and expect to execute a few phases of the game better than we did in our first meeting."

And Rinehart expects to have a "few surprises" cooked up for the Tigers.

76ers Edge Nuggets; Win 129-125

By ALEX SACHARE

AP Sports Writer

The red, white and blue ball and the three-point basket are things of the past, but the American Basketball Association lives on.

Julius Erving squared off against David Thompson Wednesday night in a matchup of two of the old ABA's brightest stars. Erving lost the battle 40-38, but he won the war.

Erving's Philadelphia 76ers trimmed Thompson's Denver Nuggets 129-125 in a double overtime thriller between two of the National Basketball Association's strongest clubs. And Erving said the victory might have given Denver something to think about.

"They're definitely one of the best clubs in the league, but they've got to respect us because we've beaten them three out of four," said Erving, who sent the game into overtime by scoring on a bank shot, a dunk and two free throws in the final 70 seconds of regulation play, wiping out a six-point Denver lead.

Philadelphia took the lead for good on a jumper by Doug Collins with 2:42 to go in the second overtime. A jumper by Thompson that would have tied the score with 15 seconds left bounced off the rim.

Erving's 38 points were his season's high, while Thompson's 40 tied his top output of the season.

Elsewhere in the NBA Wednesday night, the Seattle SuperSonics routed the Boston Celtics 114-86, the Milwaukee Bucks edged the Washington Bullets 109-107 and the Houston Rockets beat the Phoenix Suns 105-100.

Westfall Middle Cagers End Season

Westfall Middle School junior high cagers ended their season Wednesday with a win over London on the loser's court.

Westfall led 4-2, 19-10 and 26-24 at the quarters.

Theresa Stonerock led the young Mustangs with 12 points, Sheri Somers added 10, Mindy Neff netted six, Darci Aukman and Melissa Azbell each had four while Vicki Mettler tallied two.

Also performing well for the Mustangs were: Susan Schillings, Lori Metzger, Cheryl Meyers, Kim Lindsey, Karen Southern, Dena Galloway, Barb Downing, Tami Roberts, Tracy Stonerock, Rita Beard, Kris Metzger and Valli Mowery.

Westfall dropped a tough 27-25 to Greenview in the Greenview Junior High Tournament Tuesday.

FOR FRIDAY

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 20): Don't be impulsive about making changes unless you are certain they will prove beneficial. Business pursuits highly favored.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Superior-show fans may grumble tonight. CBS has a fine two-hour drama, "A Circle of Children," competing with an excellent hour of Cole Porter's music on ABC. Take your pick.

The CBS show starts at 9 p.m. EST, concerns a school of emotionally disturbed youngsters and stars Jane Alexander, the Oscar nominee who also appears Sunday as Eleanor Roosevelt in an ABC drama.

In "Circle" she plays an affluent suburbanite who with her Women's League club visits the school on a do-gooder's tour. The visitors are warned not to respond to the children.

She violates the warning, innocently winks at one emotionally troubled child in the arms of Helga, a seemingly stern, nononsense German-born instructor. Pandemonium breaks out among the kids.

Asked to leave by a thirtyish male instructor (David Ogden Stiers), the visitors flee. But Miss Alexander, moved by what she's seen, returns to apologize for the trouble she's caused.

After a scene in which it's made clear she faces life alone — her marriage is dying and her only child, a daughter, is in college — she returns to the school, asking to work as an unpaid teacher's aide.

And the lady, holder of a master's degree in sociology, is assigned to work with Helga (Rachel Roberts), a woman of little formal education but brilliant instincts for effectively helping her young charges.

Miss Roberts makes no bones about distrusting volunteers. At one point, she accuses her new aide of wanting to work with the disturbed kids "so they can solve your problems, not you solve theirs."

But Miss Alexander nonetheless plows nervously ahead, learning by trial and error and with Helga's gradual acceptance how best to help the autistic, schizoid or brain-damaged kids at the school.

Amid all this, there's a gentle, unobtrusive subplot about her relationship with Stiers, cast as a bachelor who's never been married and fears the commitment of marriage.

The show, written by Steven Gethers, is fairly well-paced, although it occasionally seems to depict too rosy a view of the progress the adult teachers make with the emotionally disturbed kids.

Two great singers, Steve Lawrence and Eydie Gorme, are doing the honors in ABC's Cole Porter musical, which starts at 10 p.m. They and visitors Bob Hope and Ethel Merman make it a dandy salute to the Broadway tunesmith.

It's a crisp, imaginative hour. But if you only can spare a few moments for it, tune in about 15 minutes after it begins and watch a group called the Swingle Singers do "Just One of Those Things."

The giant tortoise, Testudo elephantina, may weigh 600 pounds and live 200 years. It is found on some of the Seychelles Islands off the east coast of Africa. A related species is found on the Galapagos Islands off the west coast of South America.

Time For Fishing Tackle Tips

By JIM DAUBEL
For The Associated Press
March is the month for fishing tackle tips.
"There's time to repair and replace gear now that ice fishing is fading and spring awaits its turn among seasons. Likely in need of most attention is the box full of lures that is so much used and abused during the warm weather months.
Many of us could start by dropping about half the bulging contents of those boxes into the nearest trash can.

'The Bird' Flaky As Always

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — "The Bird" is back — flighty and flaky as ever but totally unspooled.
"My head must have left my body," said Mark "the Bird" Fidrych, trying to explain an uncharacteristic lapse into absent-mindedness in his 1977 pitching debut for the Detroit Tigers.
The 22-year-old rookie of the year, whose strong right arm and bizarre histrionics on the mound made him a national folk hero last season, pitched three scoreless innings, allowing three hits, as the Tigers beat the Boston Red Sox 5-4 Wednesday in baseball's spring opener.
He forgot and left his cap in the dugout at the start of the second inning. At the end of the inning he ran off the field after the second out, thinking the side was retired. He grabbed the wrong cap when he went to the mound in the third inning, and a bat boy rushed out to make the exchange.
"I heard somebody yell, 'Get your head screwed on, dummy,'" Fidrych said. "I don't know what happened to me. I guess I was too involved. I was thinking too much about the game. I was pumping too hard."
"The Bird" is always pumping — that's his trademark.

More than 4,000 fans had assembled at the Red Sox Chain O'Lakes Park when Fidrych and his teammates arrived by bus from nearby Lakeland an hour before game time. Traffic was jammed up for miles, delaying the arrival of American League President Lee MacPhail.
Hand-made signs dotted the stands: "Welcome to the Bird," "The Bird is back," "We love the Bird."
In the lockerroom, the 6-foot-2 stringbean with the shock of blond corkscrews for hair was greeted by a battery of newsmen from all around the training circuit.
"No pictures, no interviews before the game," the young pitcher said. "I've got to think."
Once outside, however, he could not turn his back on his adoring army, ranging from kids to grandpas, pleading for autographs.
"I've never seen anything like it — this kid is the greatest draw in baseball," said Hal Middlesworth, Detroit director of public relations. "He started 29 games for us last year, drew 901,239 — an average of 31,077 — a regular magnet."
The free-spirited native of Worcester, Mass., has brought a breath of fresh air to a game bogged down with labor strife and lawsuits, putting on the best show in town last year while compiling a 19-9 record and leading the major league with an earned run average of 2.34.
His father is Polish, his mother Danish and he is the lone son among three sisters. He drove a pickup truck to the ball park until a Detroit motor company gave him a new sports car and the Tigers raised his salary from $16,500 at the start of last year to a three-year graduating scale of $50,000-$75,000-$100,000.
Somebody asked him if he feared, because of his wide publicity, he might start getting hammy and cocky.
"Me? Not a chance. I've been this way all my life. I can't change."

Wrestling Tourney Set

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Only Summit Station Licking Heights has a solid chance to keep its team championship in the 40th Ohio high school wrestling meet Friday and Saturday.
The Licking County power has the most qualifiers—nine—of any of the three division contenders. Licking Heights rolled up 65½ points to 52 for runnerup Richmond Heights for the Class A title last year.
Class AAA Cleveland Heights and Class AA Mantua Crestwood, the other 1976 team winners, have little chance to repeat based on state meet entries.
The big school battle in Ohio State's St. John Arena appears to be among Macedonia Nordonia, Cincinnati Oak Hills, Cleveland St. Joseph and Galloway Westland.
Nordonia leads with eight qualifiers, one more than Cincinnati Oak Hills and Cleveland St. Joseph and two more than Galloway Westland.

Manager Bill Virdon of the Houston Astros likes to go quail hunting. Players named him "The Quail" when he played for Pittsburgh.

Shortstop Larry Bowa of the Phillies is a switch hitter but does better average-wise from the left-handed hitting stance.

Fishermen are accumulators. Convinced that even the wildest looking lure may someday come in handy, we squirrel them away with pounds of other hardware spared by the same logic.
Over the years I have found if I didn't use a bait last year I probably won't next year, or probably ever if the truth were known. Consequently, I junk it (rarely) or store it at home (usually).
Once you've thinned out old tackle, make an inventory of what items need replacing. Likely candidates include such things as splitshot, barrel and snap swivels, hooks, porkrind baits, plastic worms, rubber lure skirts and that supply of spare reel parts.
Add to your list of things to buy before spring such tackle as replacement lures, monofilament line and larger items like boots, landing nets, rain gear, rods and reels.
Once everything is on paper you are better able to set priorities on what is needed and affordable.
The successful angler invests a lot of time in his tackle before each fishing season. The rest of us do the least, hope the most, and usually manage to get by.
In addition to discarding and replacing, artificial lures should be examined closely, cleaned of rust and corrosion, and repaired where necessary. Hooks should be sharpened or replaced if they are badly rusted.
As expensive as quality monofilament is these days it is painful indeed to throw it away. Tackle companies recommend new line every year but, for the average fisherman, that is not necessary.
Plastic line does take a "set" after being on a spool for a year or more. It also hardens somewhat and loses its stretch capability. But year-old mono certainly is usable so long as you understand that it will be more difficult to cast and probably won't hold up as well under stress.
The ardent bass, muskie or walleye angler will replace mono at least once a year. The occasional weekend fishermen who tightlines for lightweights like panfish need not be so particular.

Rods and reels should get a careful once-over. Most spinning reels can be stripped down easily for cleaning and lubrication. Casting reels are a bit more complicated. I rarely disassemble a reel completely, although some people recommend it. Removing the face plate usually affords adequate access for the extent of cleaning and lubrication required for reels used under normal conditions.
Check rods for cracks or signs of stress and guides and tip-tops for roughness that is a sign of wear. Replace where necessary.
Tackle repairs are a ritual for some fishermen, a pain for others. If nothing else, it helps get the juices flowing again in anticipation of spring.

Drake Top MAC Player

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Central Michigan's leading scorer, Leonard Drake, has been named the Mid-American Player of the Week for his three-game performance in the Chippewas' final drive to the league's co-championship and NCAA tourney berth.
Drake, a 6-foot-2, 174-pound senior, scored 58 points in the three road wins for the Chippewas over Northern Illinois, Bowling Green and Ohio University.
Drake, of Niles Mich., gave his best performance against the Falcons at Bowling Green when he hit 13 of 20 from the field and added eight of nine from the foul line for 34 points in the 94-91 victory.
Also nominated for the award, the final one of its kind this basketball season, were Bowling Green's Ron Hammye, Eastern Michigan's Bill Harris, Archie Aldridge of Miami, Matt Hicks of Northern Illinois, Toledo's Stan Joplin and Tom Cutter of Western Michigan.

65 Points Still Roberts Loser

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
"Sixty-five points don't mean a thing because we lost," said a dejected Anthony Roberts, whose record 65-point output could not prevent a 90-89 loss by Oral Roberts to Oregon in an opening-round game of the National Invitation Tournament.

The 6-foot-6 senior connected on 25 field goals and 15 free throws Wednesday night, breaking the NIT record of 53 points by George Mikan in 1945.
In other NIT opening-round games, Virginia Tech beat Georgetown 83-79, Villanova defeated Old Dominion 71-68 in overtime and Houston edged Indiana State 83-82.
Virginia Tech rallied from a 40-37 intermission deficit against Georgetown, and along with the other winners, earned a berth in next week's NIT quarter-finals at Madison Square Garden, against the winner of tonight's Alabama-Memphis State game. Virginia Tech won the NIT title in 1973.

Villanova trailed Old Dominion's Monarchs for most of the game before inching ahead late in the second half. The score was tied 65-65 at the end of regulation.

Houston's victory lifted the Cougars into the quarter-finals against Illinois State, which defeated Creighton 65-58 Tuesday night.

Oregon's Ernie Kent, one of four players assigned to defense Anthony Roberts, shouted "Unbelievable!" as he watched the Titans' star continually fire the ball through the basket.

Oregon took the lead after a 40-40 halftime tie as forward Greg Ballard scored 43 points, helping offset Roberts' one-man show.

In the Virginia Tech-Georgetown game, the Gobblers grabbed the lead on a layup by Marshall Ashford with 14:04 remaining. A drive by Ron Bell and two free throws by Phil Thieneman built the margin to 55-50.

Ashford hit 16 of his 24 points in the second half. Georgetown got a game-high 28 points from Derrick Johnson. The Hoyas twice closed the gap to two points in the final three minutes.

Villanova, 21-9, trailed by as many as 11 points against the Monarchs but pulled even on a field goal by Whitey Rigby with 4:53 to go. A 20-footer by Old Dominion's Jeff Fuhrmann with 1:05 left forced the game into overtime.

In the extra period, Larry Herron's two free throws with 3:45 remaining clinched the victory for the Wildcats.

Houston led by as many as 10 points in the second half against Indiana State but the Sycamores outscored the Cougars 12-2 over a late three-minute span.

With one minute left, Indiana State's Larry Bird tied the score 82-82. With 37 seconds remaining, though, the Sycamores' Dan Rutledge fouled Mike Schultz, who made his first shot but missed the second. Bird got the ball under the basket but his jump shot bounced off the rim as the buzzer sounded.

Houston goes to the quarterfinals 27-7.
In other college basketball action, the University of North Carolina-Charlotte edged New Orleans 71-70 for the championship in the first Sun Belt Tournament. Jacksonville, N.C., rolled over Georgia State 102-72 in the consolation game.

Willie Stargell, slugging first baseman for the Pittsburgh Pirates, is a native of Earlsboro, Okla.

Tom Seaver of the New York Mets has turned in 38 shutouts in his 10 seasons with the National Leaguers.

Muhammad Ali, for the slayings of his children and demanded that authorities turn the Muslims over to him. In addition to Ali, he listed as Muslim leaders Wallace D. Muhammad, now head of the movement; his brother, Herbert Muhammad, and former Philadelphia Muslim leader Jeremiah Muslim Shabazz.

Other demands made by Abdul Khaalis during the telephone conversations were: —That authorities turn over the murderers of Malcolm X, who like Khaalis was a member of the Black Muslims before breaking with them.

—The return of a $750 fine assessed against him for shouting at the Muslim defendants during their trial for the 1973 Hanafi murders. Police returned the money Wednesday night.

—A halt to the screening of the movie "Muhammad, Messenger of God," which was scheduled for its American premiere on Wednesday in New York and Los Angeles. The distributor immediately stopped the film in mid-screening after learning of Abdul Khaalis' demand. Abdul Khaalis said the film was "a fairy tale" that demeaned and distorted the Islamic faith, although few other Moslems have objected to it.

In Chicago, Wallace Muhammad denied responsibility for the 1973 Hanafi slayings and said he deplored Wednesday's violence.

Four to six gunmen, including Khaalis, stormed the B'nai B'rith headquarters around 11 a.m., wounding eight persons and herding 100 or more hostages onto the top floor of the eight-story building. Police said 43 persons either were released or escaped the terrorists by hiding.

Of the wounded, two were hospitalized overnight, three were treated and released, and three still were being held by the terrorists. The condition of the wounded hostages was not known.

An hour after the first invasion, up to three more gunmen took the Islamic Center on Embassy Row, apparently without violence or injury. They retained 14 hostages, including center director Dr. Abdul Rauf, the city's highest-ranking Moslem.

One of the gunmen told a reporter by telephone that their actions were coordinated with Khaalis' group, and that "heads will roll" unless demands are met.

At 2:30 in the afternoon two more gunmen opened fire on the fifth floor of the District Building, where Mayor Walter Washington and the city council were at work.

They killed Maurice Williams, 24, an employee of WHUR-FM. City Councilman Marion Barry was wounded in the chest by a ricochet bullet, and two security guards were wounded, one critically. A fourth man, identified only as a building guard, lay motionless for hours under the guns of the invaders and was thought to be dead, but rescuers found him alive when they evacuated him. His condition was not known.

President Carter ordered the FBI onto the case in midafternoon, and director Clarence Kelley and Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell shuttled to and from police headquarters during the night.

Police said all three groups appeared to be in communication by telephone, although they could not say with certainty that the city hall group was related to the others. However, the city hall gunmen made no independent demands.

Abdul Khaalis told reporters that the city hall gunmen were part of his group.

Officials said they were negotiating with the terrorists but they would not describe the discussions. There were reports that Dr. Rauf had asked diplomats from Moslem countries to intercede, and that this was being done.

Abdul Khaalis was born Ernest McGhee in Gary, Ind.

The Hanafi, Moslems are a small mostly black group never before blamed for violence in the United States. They number perhaps 1,000 and consider themselves the only true followers of Islam. They are not part of the Black Muslims, a much larger organization.

MS Home Care Course Offered

The American National Red Cross and the National Multiple Sclerosis Society will be co-operating on a nationwide basis to offer a course of instruction for home care of multiple sclerosis patients.

The 20 hour course will be geared primarily for family members and friends or attendants of moderately to severely disabled homebound MS patients. It may also be of great benefit to health care workers. The two organizations will collaborate to select highly knowledgeable and skilled lecturers in their fields to cover various topics. The course itself will be free, though there will be a nominal charge for textbooks and literature.

The Pickaway County Chapter is making plans to co-operate in this project, either by conducting the course in Circleville or by helping participants to go to Columbus to receive the training. In order to decide which is the feasible plan, it is necessary to know how many people may be interested.

It would be appreciated if those who are afflicted, have family members needing care or are interested in receiving the training would call the Red Cross at 474-5736. If more than 15 or 20 people are interested, it may be possible to schedule the course in Circleville.

Warnke Wins Vote As Arms Negotiator

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is giving President Carter the man he wants to negotiate nuclear weapons reductions with the Russians, but the vote confirming Paul C. Warnke was less than the two-thirds margin that will be needed to ratify any treaty he brings back.

Opponents viewed the 58-40 vote Wednesday as advance warning to President Carter and the Soviet Union that a new SALT treaty will undergo the most vigorous Senate examination and nothing short of equality will be accepted.

Supporters of the former assistant secretary of defense contended throughout the four-day Senate debate that Warnke has the capacity to be a "tough negotiator" despite his frequent advocacy of defense budget cuts, opposition to new nuclear weapons systems, and suggestions of unilateral initiatives by the United States in arms restraint while calling on Russia to reciprocate.

They pointed out that Warnke will be acting under the direction of President Carter, who described himself Wednesday as "chief negotiator." Carter, before the vote, charged that most of those opposing Warnke's nomination "don't want to see substantial reductions in nuclear weapons in the world."

Twelve Democrats joined 28 Republicans in voting against Warnke, a 57-year-old Washington lawyer, for SALT negotiator. Forty-eight Democrats and 10 Republicans voted for.

Warnke also was confirmed to be director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency by a 70-29 vote, with 56 Democrats and 14 Republicans voting for and 24 Republicans and five Democrats voting against.

Senate Minority Leader Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn., said he saw no direct relationship between the size of the vote and Warnke's effectiveness as a negotiator, but he said it was "a signal of sorts in public and international perception of what the Senate is likely to agree to" in treaty form.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said he did not subscribe to the view that Warnke's influence as a negotiator has been damaged by the Senate debate.

But Byrd said he would personally resist any executive branch lobbying for ratification of a SALT II treaty. The judgment, he said, is one for the Senate to reach based on "its own independent study and consideration — unaffected in any way by partisan or other factors."

Ohio Community Health Assn. Discusses Governor's Budget

The Ohio Community Mental Health Association met in Columbus for a three day seminar on March 1, 2, and 3.

In order to provide adequate mental health services in the community based clinics the association took several positions on the Governor's biennial State budget.

1. Request that a Title XX Rotary fund be established within the Department of Mental Health. This would speed up the flow of money to (648) Boards to reimburse their contract agencies for mental health services that have already been provided in the clinics. A one time allocation of $5 million to the Department of Mental Health is being requested.

2. A request to appropriate $10 million to the Department of Mental Health for funding aftercare programs. As the Department of Mental Health attempts to reach the goal of state facilities accreditation by July 1, 1979, many additional patients will need to be discharged. There is currently no means available for State financial participation to provide service for these people in the community setting. This appropriation would provide funds to enable agencies to hire mental health professionals to give follow-up care for these persons and further decrease possibility for future rehospitalization.

3. Recommend that $10 million be transferred from the institutional budget into the community (648) allocation of their budgets. 648 Boards were legislated eight years ago under the intent of increasing funds each year to them. No increase has been given since 1973. The present bill calls for an increase. The Association feels the proposed budget is a necessity in order to provide adequate mental health service to our communities.

George Puchovich, executive director of 648 Board; Charles Evans, associate director; Jean Bildsten, public information co-ordinator; Leroy Davis, Ph.D. member of the (648) Boards, attended the association meeting to express concerns about providing mental health service in the rural setting. They represented Paint Valley Mental Health and Mental Retardation Board.

Three People Injured In Accidents

Three people were injured in two auto accidents investigated Wednesday by Pickaway County Sheriff's Deputies.

The first accident occurred 9:23 a.m. when Diann K. Howard, 33, Route 1, Orient, lost control of her car on the Williamsport-Palestine Road just south of the Guy Road intersection.

Deputy Sheriff Dan Dewey said Howard failed to negotiate a curve to the right and her car traveled left of center into a ditch.

The vehicle returned to the road, but swerved sharply to the left and rolled to its right side.

After a short slide, the car rolled over and came to rest on its wheels.

A passenger, Judith A. Hill, 34, 8615 Harrisburg Pike, was treated at Mt. Carmel West Hospital, Columbus, for contusions to her scalp.

Two people were hurt in a crash between two Volkswagens 6:45 p.m. on the Walnut Creek Pike.

Sandra A. Fletcher, 18, Route 2, was treated at Berger Hospital for neck and back injuries and later released, and Suzanne K. Christy, 18, 33 E. South St., Ashville, was referred to a doctor for injuries to her right arm.

Kyle S. Christy, three months, was checked at the hospital, but was apparently not hurt in the crash.

Deputy Sheriff J. Phillip Brown said the Christy car was following the Fletcher auto north on the Walnut Creek Pike and attempted to pass as Fletcher was making a left turn into a private drive.

Impact occurred in the southbound lane, he said.

Sunday Beer Sale Bill Passes House

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Signs saying "no beer sold on Sunday" will probably come down soon in many areas of Ohio if a bill approved by the House on Wednesday becomes law.

With only brief debate, the House sent the Senate 64-29 a measure that permits Sunday sale of high powered (six per cent) beer along with wine and mixed beverages no stronger than 21 per cent alcohol, subject to approval at local option elections.

Rep. Patrick J. Seeney, D-6 Cleveland, found only one House member speaking against his Sunday beer and wine bill. It was just the opposite of the emotional, marathon debate seven years ago when the House okayed local options on Sunday sale of liquor by the glass.

Rep. Alan E. Norris, R-27 Westerville, said the latest bill was not needed since beer drinkers have the option of stocking up for the weekend. He also charged that it came about as a result of pressure from owners of carryouts and other beer retailers. "A couple of special interest groups are going to get a lot of money," said Norris, whose House district claims to have been the birthplace of prohibition.

Sweeney brushed aside the Franklin County Republican's arguments, saying Ohioans have the right to make such decisions at the local level. The bill "just gives us a little addition reality," said the veteran Cleveland legislator.

Tires Taken From Cars

Four tires and wheels were taken from used Cadillacs at Clifton Motor Sales, 1395 S. Court St., after 8 p.m. Wednesday.

Pickaway County Deputy Sheriff Nick Franklin said the loss estimate was $567.

The thieves apparently became frightened while stealing the tires, and left seven hub caps and two fender skirts, all valued at $415, in the trunk of one of the cars.

Clifton Service Manager Rick Stacy said two of the tires and wheels were taken from the left side of a 1975 Cadillac Eldorado and the spare tire was taken from the trunk.

The other tire and wheel and fender skirts were taken from the left side of a 1975 Cadillac Sedan DeVille.

100 Hostages Threatened

WASHINGTON (AP) — Machete-wielding terrorists held more than 100 hostages in three buildings today, threatening to chop off heads of captives unless they are allowed to exact revenge against Black Muslim leaders they blame for a mass murder four years ago.

Gunmen, all believed to be members of the tiny, predominantly black Hanafi Moslem sect, seized the headquarters of a Jewish social service organization, an Islamic mosque and the District of Columbia city hall.

During the takeover of city hall, a black reporter for a Washington radio station was killed and a city councilman was wounded.

Police surrounded the three buildings and tried to negotiate with the men who were armed with rifles, shotguns, automatic weapons and machetes.

But as the siege continued through the night police remained uncertain how many hostages were being held and how many terrorists were in the buildings.

The largest group of hostages was being held in the eighth-floor cafeteria of the B'nai B'rith headquarters, seven blocks north of the White House. An official of the Jewish service organization said he believed as many as 118 people were in the hands of the terrorists.

Another 14 hostages were being held at the Islamic Center on Washington's Embassy Row and seven were inside the District Building, located on Pennsylvania Avenue within sight of the White House grounds.

At least three persons in the B'nai B'rith building were believed wounded.

In a telephone conversation from the B'nai B'rith building, one of the terrorists, Khalafi Hamaas Abdul

Khaalis, was asked if he would hold out indefinitely. He told an Associated Press reporter, "Don't worry, when the heads start dropping out the window, then you worry."

Abdul Khaalis described himself as the leader of the Hanafi Moslems.

His son-in-law, Abdul Aziz, was contacted in the northwest Washington headquarters of the Hanafi Moslems

where the murders took place four years ago. Abdul Aziz told reporters that if the demands of the terrorists were not met, "heads will be chopped off. A killing room will be set up at B'nai B'rith and heads will be thrown out of windows."

Mayor Walter Washington, who had been barricaded in his city hall office for several hours early in the takeover but later escaped the building, said early today that foreign diplomats were involved in discussions with the Hanafi gunmen.

Abdul Khaalis denied any knowledge of such negotiations.

Revenge for the brutal 1973 murders of seven Hanafis, six of whom were Abdul Khaalis' children, appeared to be the principal motive for the sudden invasion of the three buildings late Wednesday morning. Five Philadelphia Black Muslims were convicted of the 1973 slayings and each was sentenced to 140 years in prison.

In telephone conversations with newsmen, Abdul Khaalis blamed Black Muslim leaders, including heavyweight boxing champion

Town Meeting Still Alive In Maine

NORTH HAVEN, Maine (AP) — The townspeople began gathering well before the appointed hour of nine, neighbors all, tied to this town and this island by blood and heritage and to this gathering by a tradition older than the republic.

It began when the first Plymouth colonists met to decide among themselves matters of their common concern.

Their descendants, literal descendants in some cases on this coastal New England isle, have found no reason to change such a sensible system of direct democracy or any way to improve upon it.

Thus none of the island's 400 citizens needed further encouragement to attend than the notice posted on the bulletin board outside Waterman's general store at the town dock.

Town Meeting.

Across New England during the first two weeks in March other towns held similar meetings. Large anonymous cities may have abandoned annual one-day assemblies as too unwieldy, but towns such as North Haven yet exist as reminders that some places in this bureaucratic land have neither outgrown their identities nor yielded the Yankee notion of self-government to professionals or computers.

"David, I think Lisa had her hand up first, we'll hear you next if that's all right ..."

"I'm going to have to disagree with you, Eliot ..."

"Before we go any further I think this town owes a vote of thanks to Jimmy Brown ..."

"Ivaloo, count the hands along with me so we get the vote right ..."

With dispatch, but more important with civility and mutual trust, North Haven's citizens last Monday elected their officials, voted taxes for street lights, roads, snow fences, fireplugs, settled disagreements over clamming grounds and ferryboat service, and went home after 5½ hours satisfied that no voice was excluded, no opinion suppressed.

They know who they are, these islanders, and so they nominated from the floor and found no need for superfluous seconding speeches. They voted simply by dropping slips of paper in a box, as if electing a class beadle. The new officials were sworn on the spot. Next item.

Time and again during the meeting the sliding top of the sturdy wooden ballot box was opened, closed — "Has everybody voted who wants to?" — and its contents dumped on the table of the vote counters: Audrey Lincoln, Annie Calderwood, Ida Haskell.

The box, not much larger than a shoe box, is the craftsmanship of James Brown, a boatbuilder. He made it in 1905 when he was town clerk.

It now belongs to the present town clerk, Ivaloo Patrick, who is Brown's granddaughter. The office of town clerk has been in the same family for 73 years.

Continuity, loyalty, involvement, these are virtues North Haven islanders respect.

City-County Complex Revived?

Circleville city officials plan to contact county commissioners to see if there is a possibility of reviving the city-county justice complex plan.

In a meeting with Prindle, Patrick and Partners Tuesday there appeared to be near unanimous agreement that a joint project would be the best answer to the inadequate court facilities here.

Present at the meeting were members of council, Mayor Frank Barnhill, Fred Weingand, chief of design for the architectural firm, Municipal Court Judge Charles Hosterman; Leo Hall, president of the Pickaway County Bar Assn.

The architects had requested a meeting to present a slide review of other government complexes they had designed.

John McGinnis, a representative of the firm, said they had conducted the original study which recommended a city-county complex which would house probate, common pleas, juvenile and municipal courts, a jail and the sheriff and police departments.

The study was done for the Pickaway County Commissioners who at that time were Dick Tootle, Charles Morris and Wayne Hines, and it was federally funded. The project never got off the ground although the commissioners acquired real estate immediately west of the present court house and jail for its construction. The main stumbling block in the way of construction was funding.

Saccharin Banned By FDA Regulation As Health Hazard

WASHINGTON (AP) — Diabetics and others who can't eat sugar might be able to get saccharin as a prescription drug after the proposed federal ban on the artificial sweetener goes into effect.

The Food and Drug Administration announced the ban on saccharin Wednesday, citing a Canadian study that found large doses of the sweetener caused cancer in laboratory rats.

Canada simultaneously banned saccharin.

The FEA said it would take at least 120 days to put the ban into effect, but it called on manufacturers "to discontinue use of saccharin as soon as possible."

In announcing the ban, the FDA said it would consider allowing some limited use of saccharin to continue because no substitutes for it would be available in the near future.

But Acting FDA Commissioner Sherwin Gardner said any decision on the prescription approach was still months away.

Canada said those on restricted diets will be able to buy pure saccharin only in drug stores after Sept. 1.

Bill Collectors Urge Law On Deadbeats

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bill collector organizations say Congress should be making laws against "deadbeats" instead of trying to regulate the people who pursue them.

Representatives of bill collector organizations told a House banking subcommittee Wednesday that people who do pay their bills end up paying higher prices because of those who don't.

The panel hearings end today with testimony from consumer groups.

The collectors' testimony followed a string of witnesses who told of harassment of debtors by bill collectors, including late night phone calls and threats. But the collectors urged Congress to crack down on deadbeats instead of writing new restrictions on collectors.

"The individual consumer, you and me, must eventually pay the bills for the deadbeats," said Philip Rosenthal, president of the Virginia Collectors Association.

Michael Goldberg, incoming president of the American Collectors Association, said utility bills may be increased "as much as $5 per year to the customers who pay their accounts as a result of the money that is written off for bad debts."

And giving examples, Rosenthal picked the Prince Georges County, Md., Hospital in the home district of Rep. Gladys Spellman, D-Md., a subcommittee member. He said the hospital canceled more than $4 million

Diet soft drinks account for three-quarters of the five million pounds of saccharin used yearly in the United States. A spokesman for the National Soft Drink Association said the industry would try to develop new low-calorie beverages without saccharin.

The Coca-Cola Co. said it regretted the FDA's action, but would comply with the request to discontinue saccharin use as soon as possible.

"We will have reformulated low calorie drinks ready for the market" before the FDA ban takes effect, Coke executive vice president Charles W. Adams said in a statement from Coke's Atlanta headquarters.

The Canadian study showed that the sweetener caused bladder cancers in rats fed a diet of 5 per cent pure saccharin for their entire lives. To consume an equivalent amount of saccharin a human would have to drink 800 12-ounce diet sodas a day for a lifetime, Gardner said.

Gardner said that while he could not assess the economic impact of the decision, it would be "substantial, no question about it."

in uncollected bills last year.

"This lost revenue was made up through employee layoffs, increased insurance premiums and higher bills for all of the people of Mrs. Spellman's congressional district," he said.

Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., chairman of the subcommittee, has sponsored legislation to make threats or harassing tactics by bill collectors illegal. He said his bill would not protect people who refuse to pay a debt.

"I hold no sympathy for anyone who is capable of paying a debt and simply refuses to honor the obligation," he said.

City, County Firemen Fight 8 Fires Wednesday

FIREY WEDNESDAY — Was the story in Pickaway County Wednesday afternoon, as six county fire departments battled as many fires in a four hour period. A Clearcreek fire truck is pictured above as Clearcreek and

Pickaway Twp. firemen battle a small pocket of a 12:54 p.m. blaze that threatened Knollwood Village and other houses in the area.

Circleville firemen battled two fires within an hour in the late morning and early afternoon Wednesday.

The first call came at 11:45 a.m. at the Container Corporation plant on Mill Street. A small fire had developed in some scrap paper in a storage area. The fire had been contained by the Container Corporation fire brigade on the arrival of the C.F.D. units. Firemen were at the scene for 20 minutes.

The second alarm of the day came at 12:37 p.m. at the Charles Carle residence, 158 E. Union St. The blaze was called in by Mrs. Jeannie Carle.

Two fire units initially responded to the blaze, which supposedly started in an upstairs bedroom from causes that are unknown at this time.

A third C.F.D. truck was called to the scene approximately 30 minutes later. The loss on the house and its contents has not yet been determined.

Two men were injured while fighting the fire. Fireman Martin Garner received lacerations to his left hand from broken glass, and Lt. Dan Grant was treated and released from the Berger Hospital Emergency Room for exhaustion.

A total of seven firemen were on the scene for two hours and 15 minutes.

Fire fighters in Pickaway County were kept busy also with six blazes in a four-hour period Wednesday afternoon.

Clearcreek and Pickaway units battled a 12:54 p.m. grass fire on Pontious Road that threatened Knollwood Village.

The Clearcreek Department also fought a 12:19 p.m. grass fire on Railroad St. in Stoutsville, and the Williamsport Fire Department battled a 1:44 p.m. car fire on Route 22.

Saltcreek, Tarlton, and Whisler units fought a 2:31 p.m. blaze in a field off Hefner Road, the Mt. Sterling Fire Department fought a 4 p.m. fire in Era, and the Tarlton Department fought a grass fire 4:34 p.m. in Tarlton.

In addition, Kingston and Pickaway Twp. units were called to a false fire alarm at PPG Industries at 3:16 p.m., and Harrison Twp. units were summoned to avert a possible LP gas explosion at Gregor's Trailer Court 1:31 p.m.

HOUSE FIRE — Circleville Firemen are pictured above as they try to extinguish a pocket of flames near the roof of the Charles Carle residence, 158 E. Union St. The fire is believed to have started in the upstairs bedroom, but the cause of the blaze is still undetermined. Three pieces of equipment and seven firemen were at the scene for two hours and 15 minutes.

Markets

NEW YORK (AP) —The stock market declined again today as government figures confirmed Wall Street's fears of a two-digit rise in the wholesale price index last month.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks slipped nearly 2 points in early trading, and losers outnumbered gainers by about a 4-3 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

As the market opened, the Labor Department reported that the wholesale price index rose 0.9 per cent in February after seasonal adjustment, for the equivalent of a 10-8 per cent annual rate.

The data reflected the effects of bad weather on agricultural product prices.

Stocks traded actively included Citicorp, down 1/4 at 28 3/4; General Motors, off 1/8 at 70 1/2; Sterling Drug, 1/4 lower at 15 1/4, and American Telephone & Telegraph, down 1/4 at 62 3/4.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 9.14 to 942.00, in its biggest drop since it gave up 9.64 points on Jan. 20.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about a 9-4 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume reached 19.68 million shares, up from 19.52 million on Tuesday.

The NYSE's composite index lost .41 to 54.42.

Dynamite Blast Probe Continues

CAREY, Ohio (AP) — The explosion of 20 tons of dynamite near this village shook northwest Ohio, popped nails from walls in a deputy sheriff's bedroom and caused property damage up to 20 miles from the rural scene.

No one was injured. But houses, barns and businesses were damaged, mostly in a northeasterly direction from the rural site 1 1/2 miles northeast of the village of 3,500 persons.

Sheriff Mark R. Kauble of Wyandot County said the dynamite owned by a stone quarry "was detonated by someone who had knowledge of explosives." He said there were no suspects in the Wednesday predawn blast but that his staff followed up reports from persons who claimed to have knowledge of the explosion.

"We're not pointing a finger at anybody," Kauble said. "But if it was done by someone locally we might have an arrest in a couple of days."

"The scene evidence indicates it was intentionally detonated and virtually eliminates the possibility of an accident."

evidence.

"Dad said he at first thought it was an earthquake," said Bill Lindsay, 34, who rushed here from Defiance, Ohio, 40 miles away, when his father called. "I think that clump of trees between us and the dynamite was the only thing that kept it from leveling their home."

"All the windows are gone and the second floor of the house is shifted."

"I thought at first it was going to be a tornado," said John Greer, 73, who lives near the Lindsays. "But I looked out and saw a clear sky and I didn't know what it was." Greer's barn was moved on its foundation and its doors blown off. Glass littered the bed where Greer and his wife had been sleeping.

Both live a half-mile from the explosion of what Kauble estimated was 40,000-50,000 pounds of dynamite stored in a munitions-like magazine by the National Stone and Lime Quarry. Ray Brandon, director of safety for the quarry, declined to estimate the quantity of dynamite that went up but said "It was in the thousands of pounds."

Relatives Await Action On Terrorists

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Relax and be patient," says the sign under the big red cross on the door of the church. But the people inside are not relaxed. They are not patient.

"How can we relax? Our mothers, fathers, sisters, brothers — the people we love are there," asks a girl who waits.

Ebbing and flowing, about 100 people wait for word about the fate of their relatives and friends who were taken hostage by terrorists Wednesday at the B'nai B'rith headquarters several blocks away.

They wait in a brightly lit, cot-lined basement of the Foundry Methodist Church. The mood is quiet, almost fragile. People speak very gently and politely. Two women hold hands, relatives embrace.

But there is a current of anger. Here and there, angry young men in jeans and track shoes huddle and mutter. They come in. They leave without explanation.

One young man exercises on the floor, stretching his legs, while a man being interviewed on television spouts hatred for Jews. The young man curses and sneers.

Later in the evening, the families meet with Dan Thursz, executive vice president of B'nai B'rith. He is trying to compile an accurate list of hostages, and he begins reading names from payroll records, guest books and any other source he can find. These are the people he thinks were in the building when the terrorists struck.

About 50 hushed people cluster around. Occasionally, a name is called and someone says that person is safe. "Are you sure?" Thursz asks. A name is taken from the list.

But that happens rarely, and when Thursz is done, there are 120 names still on the list, still presumably on the eighth floor of the B'nai B'rith building. "I think it's going to be a long wait," Thursz says.

Everyone clusters around the television for news bulletins. Afterwards, the room is almost silent and the television becomes a grotesque silent movie of comedies, commercials, singing and dancing.

Urge Backing For Dam

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Licking River in Northern Kentucky could be a source of clean drinking water for the Cincinnati area if Cincinnati City Council will support Falmouth's plans for a long delayed dam, promised Falmouth, Ky., Mayor Max Goldberg.

Goldberg, speaking before city fathers Wednesday, promised the city all the clean drinking water it needs plus electricity.

"No matter how much you treat the water from that cesspool—the Ohio River—your drinking water is going to stay polluted," Goldberg said.

He said the $76 million Falmouth Dam, on the drawing boards of the U.S. Corps of Engineers, would provide unlimited drinking water from the Licking River, which has no pollution and no cities or industries south of Falmouth.

"This thing has been studied enough," Goldberg charged. Funds for final studies were cut off for this year, he charged, after Falmouth proposed a hydroelectric system be added to the dam that would create a 90-mile reservoir.

Women Urged To Read Reader's Digest Article

"Any woman who feels confused or frightened by the controversy over who should have mammography will be reassured by the facts presented in an article in March Reader's Digest," Dr. William A. Myers of the Pickaway County Unit of the American Cancer Society said today.

Titled, "What Every Woman Should Know About Breast X-Ray," the article is an interview with breast cancer expert, Benjamin F. Byrd, Jr., M.D., 1976 American Cancer Society President. It was written by Walter S. Ross.

Dr. Myers said that he was calling attention to this article to help dispel the uncertainty and fear created by conflicting views on the safety of mammography which have appeared in the media in recent months. The confusion has caused some women to refuse mammography examinations, he said, even women with obvious signs that could mean breast cancer. These people are endangering their lives, he added.

In the magazine interview Dr. Byrd affirms that nobody knows for sure what the hazards of these low dose x-rays might be. But if there are risks, they are very small and must be weighed against the benefit of detecting a breast tumor very early, when it is most curable.

He also spells out the signs and personal, or family, circumstances which place certain women at higher risk than others of developing this disease. In this special group are women with chronic systic mastitis; lumps and thickenings in the breast; nipple discharge or other nipple abnormalities; a personal history of breast cancer; a family history of the disease; early onset of menstruation; no history of pregnancy; first full-term pregnancy after age 30. For these women Dr. Byrd believes mammography is vitally important.

The article includes up-to-date statistics: nearly 90,000 women will get breast cancer during the year; over 33,000 will die. It also gives a brief history of this widely discussed breast x-ray technique and its use in special detection centers around the country today. Dr. Myers said that the best hope against breast cancer at the present time is early detection, and quoted Dr. Byrd's interview, "Unless you find and treat breast cancer at the earliest stage, you lose the best chance of cure — you want to pick it up as early as possible. And nothing does this better than mammography."

Ohio Grain Industry Hits EPA Regulations

The Ohio grain industry has charged the federal Environmental Protection Agency with grossly underestimating the ultimate cost of that agency's proposal for further regulating air pollution from new and modified grain elevators, according to Dick Bowers of the Pickaway Grain Co. of Circleville. Bowers further said that the proposal would take six cents per bushel for his firm to conform with this EPA proposal!

Costs quoted by the Ohio Grain, Feed & Fertilizer Association range as high as $200 million dollars for the Ohio industry to install the necessary equipment to prohibit the escape of beeswings (from corn) and grain dust particles and 40 million to operate it annually in this state!

The grain association was particularly concerned with the estimated increased power requirement of about 300 additional horsepower of 150 per cent present power requirements just to meet the pollution needs. All this at a time when energy is in short or at limited supply!

Further, Bowers pointed out that most of the grain beeswings and dust is emitted in rural areas, areas which observe daily clouds of dust rising from tractor operated machinery in the fields, and rural communities which have lived with dusty streets since the days of the early settlers. He said that the particulate matter involved here should not be considered in the same category as hydro-carbons or inorganic emissions. EPA does not even have conclusive data that indicates that these emissions are harmful to health, or for that matter are serious sources of nuisances for our society.

Many farmers will also have to conform with this EPA proposal - all installations with a combined grain leg capacity exceeding 10,000 bushels per hour are affected. Consumers will pay a little more for groceries and farmers lose 8 to 10 cents a bushel when they market their crops!

Chile Apology Disavowed By Government

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is disclaiming an American envoy's apology for U.S. involvement in the overthrow of Salvador Allende's government in Chile.

Yet, as a candidate last year, President Carter himself criticized the Ford administration for helping establish the military dictatorship that now rules Chile.

The administration appeared stunned Tuesday when Brady Tyson, deputy leader of the U.S. delegation to the U.N. Human Rights Commission, issued the apology during a commission debate in Geneva. He said:

"Our delegation would be less than candid and untrue to ourselves and our people if we did not express our profoundest regrets for the role some government officials, agencies and private groups played in the subversion of the previous, democratically elected Chilean government that was overthrown by the coup of Sept. 11, 1973."

But in Washington the State Department disavowed the apology, saying it was a "personal one that was not approved in advance and is not an expression of the administration's views."

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said the President had no prior knowledge of Tyson's remarks. He refused to say how Carter reacted when told of Tyson's remarks.

Overtime Ban Bill Stirs Arguments

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Opposition continued to mount Tuesday night to a controversial bill that permits workers to refuse overtime and mandates other changes in Ohio's labor laws.

Spokesmen for trains and telephone operations are the latest to join manufacturers and other employers against the bill by Sen. Marigene Valiquette, D-11 Toledo.

Roger W. Hoffman of Cleveland, division personnel manager for Ohio Bell Telephone Co. told the Senate Commerce and Labor Committee his firm, like other employers who run businesses seven days a week and 24 hours a day, are opposed. Hoffman said Ohio Bell, if unable to get employees to work during peak periods, would have "unreasonable and disastrous delays in service."

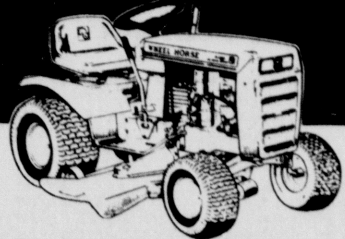

He also objected to other provisions, including specified meal periods, minimum lunch room facilities, and employee rest periods. He said Ohio Bell recognizes "the purpose is to ensure a safe and healthy work environment for employees."

But Hoffman said the Federal Occupational Health and Safety Act sets special standards for the telecommunications industry, and in addition, Ohio Bell's employees are represented "by one very reputable and responsible union... able to protect the employee's interest."

Joseph S. Gill, representing the Ohio Railroad Association, said provisions in the Valiquette bill obviously would be difficult to meet aboard trains.

As an example, he raised a question as to how trains could be run on schedule if requirements were met for lunch and rest periods when a train was en route.

Barkeep Therapy System Tried

FARGO, N.D. (AP) — Got a problem? Don't know where to turn? See a Fargo bartender or hairdresser. They may offer you more than booze and beauty and tell you where you can get help.

Some area bartenders and beauticians — daily recipients of woe and worry from troubled customers — are being groomed to help patrons find ways to deal with life's challenges.

Workshops for barkeeps and beauticians are being held because they "are in unique professions to promote mental health and prevent mental illness," says Lois Quam, publicity director for the Cass County Mental Health Association, a workshop cosponsor.

"Patrons have found that bartenders are willing listeners who don't make damning judgments when they hear of a person's problems," she says.

Seventy beauty college students recently completed a workshop, called "Shampoo, Set and Sympathy," to help guide women who don't know where to turn with their troubles.

"What we're trying to do is train them to be good listeners, and to recognize people in trouble and inform them as to where mental health resources are available" in such problem areas as family, job and alcoholism, says Mrs. Quam. "This is for anybody with problems."

Workshops consist in part of role playing so that participants might learn how to react to a client who, for example, suddenly cries because of a heavy burden, she says.

Mrs. Quam says workshops also stress that troubled people are usually reluctant to seek professional help because they feel it carries a stigma, but will readily confide in a bartender or beautician.

Dr. Will Wells, director of the alcohol program at the Southeast Mental Health and Retardation Center, a cosponsor of the workshops, says drinkers with problems often unload on the bartender, giving the barkeep an opening to respond with helpful suggestions about professional help.

Sooner or later, most everyone wants to talk to the bartender, and familiarity with him breeds some degree of comfort, says Dr. Wells. "With comfort comes openness."

But whether a troubled drinker will respond to the bartender's advice isn't known, Wells says. "We encourage bartenders to call us and tell if he's making a referral."

Bar owner Kenneth Habinger, 44, Casselton, is one of the workshop speakers.

"I'm sure almost every bartender on occasion has had a chance to help somebody out when they have a tough situation to face," says Habinger. "The main thing to remember is that a bartender is not a psychiatrist. He should just try to refer customers to the proper people who will help them."

doesn't owe one dime on this debt."

She is not liable under New Jersey law because Caputo contracted the debt before their marriage, said the congresswoman.

The subcommittee also heard testimony from former bill collectors who said collection agencies try to generate fear in debtors.

They said a standard technique is to threaten garnishment of wages and other legal action if the debt is not paid.

William R. Mann of Suitland, Md., said, "With only a few exceptions, and I want to emphasize the word few, I have never heard of an honest or reputable collection agency."

"Debt collectors sell only one thing: they are merchants of misery," said Mann, who spent 12 years in the business.

Search For Simplicity

Even in this highly complex civilization, or perhaps because of it, some people still are packing up a few essential belongings and heading for the woods. They are looking for the simple life, but whether they find it or like it very long once they do only time can tell.

Man does seem to be making life unnecessarily complicated. Within a generation or two a contract between two people has progressed from a simple handshake to a document so filled with whereases it defies explanation by a battery of Philadelphia lawyers.

The entrepreneur finds the complexities, forms, licenses and assorted red tape involved in organizing a business more challenging than the competition. If he succeeds in launching his enterprise, almost immediately he is bombarded by an endless array of surveys, census reports, questionnaires, tax reports and on-site inspections by innumerable agencies.

Individual citizens fare little better. It isn't that some government officials do not try to reduce the onslaught.

President Ford ordered federal departments to cut the number of forms across the board — and they succeeded, only to find more man hours were consumed by the remaining forms because in the meantime they had expanded.

President Carter, in his first fireside chat, not only promised to reduce government regulations but "make sure that those that are written are in plain English for a change." That is an ambition almost beyond belief.

$2 Bill: Sense Or Nonsense?

By PHYLLIS BATTELLE
NEW YORK — On the face of it, it sounds absurd ... a high-priced television commercial campaign to sell the public on the attractions of — money.

Can you hear the pitch? "Here's a product that is more than attractive. It is useful. It is exchangeable and guaranteed to add flair to your wallet. It's drip-dry. Try Money today — you'll be glad you did!"

Not since the early 1800s, when paper money began to be recognized as legal tender in the U.S., has the need for such publicity been so keenly felt as it is today. The reason is that America is now flooded with newly issued two-dollar bills — and they're just not selling.

"The Deuce is a Dud," according to the Wall St. Journal. And the Treasury Department is now considering a $300,000 advertising blitz to try to make people like it.

"I doubt that such a maneuver will work," says my friendly neighborhood Banker's Trust manager, Rudy Grexa, "but publicity is the only way the $2 bill stands a chance. We didn't dream the resistance would be as strong as it is when they issued the bills last spring. We're a small branch, but I ordered $10,000 worth of 'two's,' thinking some of our customers would like to be in on a new thing."

"Well, I can't say 'we couldn't give 'em away.' We could have given them away, of course. But we couldn't offer them to people who were cashing checks. They'd just hand them back to our tellers and say, 'I'd rather have singles if you don't mind.'"

"At first, we didn't think much about it," Grexa says, "but after a while it became obvious that we had a real loser in the two-dollar bill. Even the collectors didn't take it to much, because too many were issued at once: 400 million of them."

"I guess you'd have to say they're the Edsels of the economy."

No one I've spoken to seems to know why, but two-dollar bills are considered, by the superstitious, to be bad omens. "The hard-luck bill," as Grexa puts it, "from way back. It's strange. The two-dollar bill was retired from the market because it wasn't selling back in 1966. I bought one for each of my kids at the time, because I thought it would have nostalgia value. You wonder why they brought them back now."

The idea, as Treasury Secretary William Simon saw it last April, was to save money: Simon figured that printing costs (about 1.5 cents a bill) could be cut in half if the public gradually replaced their singles with deuces. The average bill wears out in 18 months, and since printing $2s costs no more than printing $1s, the cost-saving factor would be substantial.

Before issuing the $2 bill, a public opinion poll was taken. It showed that 73 per cent of the people polled opposed the idea of the new bill — but 95 per cent said they would accept it as change.

Well, they changed their minds.

Since people don't like to admit that they are superstitious about money (few people will admit openly that the deuce is a jinx), the major reason given for rejecting the bill is that it is too easy to confuse with a $1 or a $20, when you're in a hurry. Shopkeepers claim that they don't like them, not only because their clientele doesn't like them, but because there is no slot in the average drawer of cash registers to handle another denomination. Thus, says the Journal, "Some of the biggest names in retailing don't stock the two-dollar bill for making change." Among them, the

Business World

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Among the very basic issues being discussed in business and financial circles with mixed frustration and hope, issues that underlie and affect more specific, immediate concerns, are these:

—Is appreciation of the riskreward principle eroding?

In the past, it was assumed that the individual who assumed responsibility, who took on the greater challenge and therefore accepted the greater risk, should receive the greater rewards if successful.

This spirit, we are told, was vital to the development of the United States, but now a good many critics say it is being smothered in legislation, regulation, taxes, and high interest rates.

Often expressed, the view was re-stated this week by the chairman of the New York Stock Exchange, William Batten.

"What is needed now," he said, "is for the administration to convert awareness — and campaign promises — into action that will encourage risk-taking."

Batten said he referred specifically to tax reform designed to accelerate capital formation and encouraging investing, such as the double taxing of dividends and the "unrealistic" tax treatment of capital gains.

But in general, he said, the business community faces a tremendous if not impossible task in "trying to educate policymakers, opinion leaders and much of the public itself to the crucial economic lifeline between risk-taking and job formation."

While the business community expresses itself in these words, however, some critics ask if the business community isn't also contributing to what is seen as a loss of the entrepreneurial spirit.

These critics refer to the tendency of some businesses to attempt to reduce risk by controlling markets, by seeking government assistance for especially risky projects and to limit foreign competition, by insisting on cost-plus contracts, and by avoiding innovation as dangerous boat-rocking.

—Can we house the nation properly while continuing the use of traditional mortgage instruments?

The question might seem academic at the moment, because housing markets seem to be growing healthier by the day. But, while the averages and over-all statistics might look good, the breakdown reveals defects.

The major problem seems to be that housing costs and down payment, monthly installments, taxes, interest charges — have put private housing beyond the hopes of many young families.

Older people are complaining too. Having paid off the mortgage, they now find themselves faced with rising operating costs and taxes, and pensions that don't keep pace.

The lenders are griping as well, particularly about being locked into 20 to 30-year commitments at fixed rates of interest when, they observe, nobody is able to tell what rates will be six months from now.

The most commonly suggested solution is the variable rate mortgage, now being used in California and some other areas, the cost of which rises — and conceivably even falls — with prevailing interest rates.

Another mortgage would require small payments early in the contract, when the young homeowner presumably would have relatively small income and big expenditures, and larger payments later on.

For older people the reverse mortgage has been proposed. It would permit the elderly homeowner to use the equity in his or her home as an annuity that would provide a certain sum for life.

The U.S. League of Savings Associations, whose members make up the nation's largest mortgage-lending group, believe that before it can be implemented, current federal and state regulations would have to be updated.

—Which way will interest rates go? Everyone is asking. Involved in this question are issues so fundamental to our economic well-being — plant construction, housing, jobs, prices, the stock market — that it might be the number one economic issue of the moment.

But nobody knows the answer.

Speaking Of Your Health

by Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Our 16-year-old daughter has had asthma for a number of years. It is kept in fairly good control by drugs. She will be going to college soon. Do you think it advisable to choose a school in an area beneficial to asthma sufferers? We also thought of moving to such a place.

Mrs. L. E., Vt.

Dear Mrs. E.:
A dry climate, without wide swings of temperature, is considered favorable for people who have asthma.

Unfortunately, climate is not always the total answer to the complex problem of asthma. I have known many families who have impulsively uprooted themselves and moved into a new geographic area for this reason, only to find that climate in their cases did not materially affect the asthma.

The total upheaval of the family can lead to much disappointment and heartache.

Choosing a school in an area that is reputed to be beneficial for asthma patients is a good idea. If your daughter is not benefitted or if her asthma becomes worse, by this choice she can always consider another area.

Unlike whole families who decide to make a tremendous move, your daughter's temporary residence will not affect her a great deal. Testing out a new geographic area before uprooting the family is the only way to appraise its advantages for people with asthma, bronchitis or emphysema.

There are now many new, exciting drugs on the horizon which are beneficial in preventing asthmatic attacks and controlling them. It is my personal belief that, in a few years, asthma will be a controllable disease.

My doctor always seems to sidetrack answering questions about how long an illness will last. Can't the prognosis as well as the diagnosis, be part of good medical practice? I am in show business and when I have bad laryngitis it's important for me to know how soon I can get back to work.

Mr. H. R., N.Y.

Dear Mr. R.:

It is the wise doctor who does not fall into the trap of prognosticating, or guessing, the exact duration of an illness.

Not only people who are in show business, but almost everyone likes to plan on the time of recovery.

Yet all of us in the practice of medicine have learned that there are too many factors that enter into each individual person's recovery from an illness.

With simple laryngitis, recovery depends on the cause, the diligence with which the patient cooperates with the doctor, the elimination of tobacco and the reduction of vocal abuse. Therefore it is almost impossible to assure the patient that on "a week from Wednesday or Thursday" he can go back to work.

Drought Lingers In Western States

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — In spite of late-February storms that brought new hope to the rain-starved West, March is toeing at its gentlest over an area suffering through one of the driest years in history.

An Associated Press survey of drought-affected Western states shows that an increasingly grim picture has not been brightened by sporadic precipitation breaking through a coastal high pressure system that has held off storms for most of the winter.

Ski resorts from California to Utah, for example, experienced a brief mini-boom in business from only the first or second good snowfall this year. But the snow soon melted.

At a few resorts, it was already too late. Hoping for better times next year, they have shut down lifts, laid off standby employees and boarded up lodges.

In water-rationed Marin County, across the bay from San Francisco, residents who set out dishpans and buckets to catch rain got only 1½ inches of water after four days of on-and-off rainfall.

East of Colorado, another storm system has settled in, but without bringing rain or snow, just wind to pick up the dusty topsoil.

Scattered along with the soil was an undetermined amount of the unsprouted winter wheat seed normally protected by a snow blanket at this time of year.

In Washington, there is a slight chance of a wetter-than-usual spring, but federal officials said that because the first part of the winter was so dry, it would take 285 per cent of normal precipitation before summer to bring conditions back to normal.

In Oregon, long-range snowpack and precipitation forecasts are the worst in 100 years.

In Sacramento, Calif., hydrologists at the National Weather Service's River Forecast Office each week cut their estimates of how much water will run off into California's river and reservoir system.

At the start of February, they predicted only about a third more runoff this summer than in 1924, until now the driest year on record.

But by the beginning of March, chief hydrologist Robert Burnash said the center was predicting — at best — just 86 per cent as much water as in 1924, making this the worst drought in California's history.

A report issued Tuesday by

California's Department of Water Resources said there was little chance of major rainfall in the immediate future since that off-shore high pressure area has shown no sign of dissipating.

A California economist warned on Tuesday that, under the worst of three possible scenarios, more than 250,000 jobs and $6 billion could be lost in California because of the drought.

Even under the best scenario, David Auslam, senior economist with the state Department of Water Resources, told the Governor's Drought Conference in Los Angeles, California will lose about $2.9 billion in income and about 57,000 jobs.

In Washington, D.C., the U.S. Geological Survey said stream flows in February were below normal in 80 per cent of the nation and ground water supplies were being depleted at an alarming rate.

Bill Would End Guard Exemption

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio National Guardsmen would not be exempt from jury duty in the future under a bill approved by the Senate and sent Tuesday to the House.

Sen. Charles L. Butts, D-23 Cleveland, the bill's sponsor, said present law allows guardsmen to be excused for a $5 fee paid to the courts by their guard units—a practice he claims is unfair.

The Clevelander said Adj. Gen. James C. Clem favors the bill but that only a few of the 100 guard units in the state utilize the exemptions. Even then, Butts quoted the guard commander as saying the existing law has been "an embarrassment."

They'll Do It Every Time

'Children's Hour' Tryouts Scheduled

"The Children's Hour," by Lillian Hellman or better labeled "The Lie," will be Roundtown Players final production of the 1976-77 season.

Ms. Hellman is one of the major playwrights of this century. From "The Children's Hour" to "The Little Foxes" and "Toys in the Attic," her plays have become an enduring part of the American Theatre.

Because of the subject matter of this play, RTP members ask those interested in trying out to be familiar with the play. The title can be deceiving, as it is an adult drama.

The true theme is the curse of gossiping and a whispering campaign, the kind of vicious lying that may easily wreck the lives of innocent persons.

The play has the following roles for casting: nine girls, age 14 thru 18 who are students in an all-girls school; 2 women (mature 30's) the teachers of the school; 3 older women to play the maid, grandmother, and the aunt. Either a young or older man is needed to play the (grocery boy) man, and one male who is in love with one of the teachers.

Girls auditioning for the roles of students are requested to wear white blouse and dark skirt at tryouts.

Tryouts will be March 15 and 16 at 7:30 p.m. in Memorial Hall. Playbooks may be obtained from the director, B. J. Sowers, 474-3991.

Fumes Hurt Attendance At Park

CINCINNATI (AP) — Chemical fumes are causing visitors to run away from Mother Nature at a 1,010-acre county park here.

William Canedy, Hamilton County park district director-secretary, has warned that attendance at the Shawnee Lookout Park may have to be restricted because of chemical fumes from a nearby industry.

An archeology hike in the park about three weeks ago had to be curtailed, Canedy reported, because of "strong fumes which made one person ill."

A total of 65 persons on the hike had to leave the park while holding handkerchiefs over their faces.

The fumes generally settle in valleys of the southwestern Hamilton County park and "it's so serious at times you can hardly see to drive in parts of the park," Canedy said.

Canedy told park commissioners it may become necessary to close parts of the park at times of the day when the fumes are at their worst.

The source of the fumes "evidently" is the Kaiser Agricultural Chemicals plant, Canedy said.

Commissioners instructed Canedy to write the board chairman of Kaiser Agricultural corporate headquarters in Oakland, Calif.

Canedy said that before Monday he had not talked with or written to Kaiser "because I wanted to be sure it (the pollution) was coming from Kaiser before taking the problem to the park board."

Senior Citizens Gain Strength

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio's senior citizens apparently are having their voice heard more strongly in Ohio's legislature, just as they have in Congress in recent years.

Political scientists say it is because longer life trends and a nationwide baby "bust" are combining to make the elderly into a larger and more significant voting bloc.

Drug and utility bills are two areas in which relief could come this year on the state scene, although envisioned state subsidies for gas and electric bills could be jeopardized by fund shortages.

However, hearings got under way in both the Senate and House this week on identical bills that could give not only senior citizens but other segments a break in the purchase of prescription drugs.

Sen. Robert D. Freeman, D-29 Canton, took before the Senate Education and Health Committee Tuesday night his measure allowing pharmacists to substitute less costly generic products for brand name prescription drugs.

Freeman, who said he has been working on his legislation for 18 months, was surprised a week before when a carbon copy of it emerged in the House.

Rep. Edward J. Orlett, D-34 Dayton, introduced that measure which was scheduled to be heard today by the House Judiciary Committee. Identical bills can emerge in separate chambers when the same requests are submitted to the billdrafting Legislative Service Commission.

Freeman quoted the welfare department as saying his bill could result in a savings in Ohio of $1 million to $5 million a year, since drugs can vary widely in price from one pharmacy to another.

He said the bill permits the pharmacist to select a less costly drug than the one prescribed if the doctor permitted the druggist to select an alternative product and pass the savings to the customer.

The Stark County lawmaker gave assurances that the legislation "will do nothing to disrupt the patient-doctor-pharmacist relationship."

He said once the public is educated

about the measure "the savings to those on fixed incomes and the elderly who depend on medication to survive is incalculable."

Meanwhile, hearings are continuing in the House on a measure by Rep. Dennis E. Eckart, D-18 Euclid, which would have the state pick up 25 per cent of the gas and electric bills of Ohioans 65 and over, during the heating season November through April. It also would include help for disabled Ohioans.

Eckart's bill, however, is predicated upon the ability of the finance committees in the legislature to come up with $40 million to $60 million the subsidy package would cost.

At the same time, efforts are under way in the legislature to increase the income limitation to qualify for the homestead property tax exemption from $10,000 to $15,000 a year. The property tax break currently is given to homeowners 65 and over who occupy their own homestead.

Dear Abby:

By Abigail Van Buren

Lifer Wants To Donate Kidney

DEAR ABBY: I am a 36-year-old man who is in Rutland, Vt., doing 30 years to life for second degree murder. I killed a 15-year-old girl. No reason. I just went off my rocker.

Now the problem: I read in your column that a lot of people need kidneys. I know that kidneys have been transplanted successfully, and I want you to put me in touch with someone who needs one so I can donate one of mine. I don't mean after I'm dead. I mean right now. I know a person can live with only one kidney so if I could give one of mine now maybe I could sleep better.

I realize I can't bring back that poor little girl whose life I took, but I could give some other person life. It won't balance the scales, but it would give some meaning to my life, which is practically useless now.

This letter was not written in haste. I've thought about it for a long time. I'm not very religious, but God knows this is a sincere request. Can you help me get it granted, Abby?

GEORGE H.

DEAR GEORGE: I don't know the laws governing such a donation, but if you're sincere (and I believe you are) tell the chaplain of the correctional institution what you've told me, and he will advise you. God bless.

DEAR ABBY: A friend has asked me to play "Dear Abby" and mediate a fuss between her and her husband, and I honestly don't know what to tell her. It seems that her husband is bug-ged because she is always doing knitting, needlepoint or some kind of handiwork when they're watching TV or just visiting.

He says she has all day to do whatever she wants, and when he comes home, she should give him her undivided attention. He wants her to look at him while they're conversing.

She says she can hear every word he says, and she DOES look at him almost constantly, so he has no legitimate beef.

I can see his point, Abby, but I can also see hers. Do you think he has the right to ask her to quit doing needlework in his face? And should she just to please him?

IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR IN: He hasn't the right to ask her to quit. Handiwork for many (men as well as women) is therapeutic. It's relaxing and relieves tension. Tell her I said she could stick to her needlework

-but look up a little more.

DEAR ABBY: I have a small but annoying problem I need help with. It seems that whenever I telephone a friend I haven't spoken to for some time, his or her first words are something like, "Well, I don't believe I am actually hearing from you," or, "My goodness, I thought you dropped off the edge of the earth, etc. . ." (I'm sure you get the idea, Abby.)

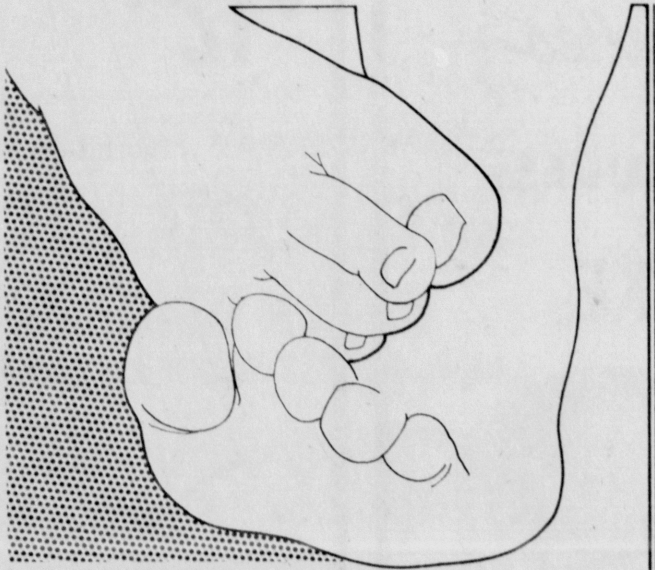

It irks me to be put down with such a negative reception, when I have finally taken the initiative and called someone, as though it were MY obligation to do so.

It's the same kind of guilt some elderly folks or shut-ins lay on those who haven't been around to see them for a while. In other words, how does one cope with people who make you feel guilty?

DEAR IRKED: No one can make you feel "guilty" unless you've earned the guilt. (Irritated, put down and even outraged perhaps, but not guilty.) There's no way to prevent others from needing you. Develop a tougher side.

Man Jailed After Talk With Carter

WARRENSVILLE HEIGHTS, Ohio (AP) — Armed only with a good luck wish from President Carter, surrendered hostage-taker Cory Moore, 25, today was in county jail awaiting grand jury action on two preliminary kidnapping charges resulting from his two-day, siege at City Hall here.

Moore was jailed late Wednesday after receiving a telephone call from Carter which Secret Service agents at both ends of the special phone line would not allow anyone to monitor.

But as Moore was being whisked away to the Cuyahoga County Jail in Cleveland for detention in a cell in lieu of bonds totaling $200,000, he told reporters, "He (Carter) wished me luck."

The unemployed ex-Marine surrendered peacefully Wednesday morning as he said he would at the end of a Carter White House news conference which covered several topics including Moore.

Carter admitted that promising to talk to Moore even with the stipulation that he first release the second of two hostages might be setting a "dangerous precedent."

But moments after Carter completed the news conference—which Moore was watching on a television he had swapped earlier in the siege for 17-year-old hostage Shelley Kiggins—Moore gave remaining hostage Det. Leo Keglovic, 49, the two handguns he used to keep Keglovic's fellow officers at bay for 45 hours and submitted himself to arrest.

Magicians' Machinery Developed By Man

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — George Kirkendall is a magician with machinery.

Everything he makes works like magic.

Kirkendall, 44, of suburban Upper Arlington, manufactures small metal precision devices used by magicians.

He's been at it for 12 years and says he grosses about $20,000 annually from sales to clients worldwide. He makes 40 different items that magicians use in performing their tricks. The items sell for $15 to $200.

Kirkendall was formerly a sales engineer for Taylor Instruments Co., of Rochester, N.Y., which makes industrial precision instruments.

He says grinding out precision metal equipment for magicians is a vanishing art.

One of his trick gadgets is a metallic version of the old shell game.

Another is a reel that can be concealed and used to wind string attached to items which magicians make vanish or appear to float through the air.

"Many of the things I make are never seen by the public," Kirkendall said.

His shop is in the basement of his home and he said business has been getting better in the last four years.

He is also secretary of the Magic Hobby Club of Ohio, which he says has 52 members and is the oldest magic club in the United States.

Kirkendall also restores and repairs antique magic devices.

For the past year he has been restoring a mechanical peacock, made sometime before 1800. It was once used by Robert Houdin, world known French magician who died in 1871.

When it works, the peacock walks, stops, spreads its tail feathers, and walks on.

Government Rule By Bureaucrats Hit

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A bipartisan effort has started in the legislature to end government rule by "unelected officials."

Sponsors urged approval Tuesday night of a bill by Rep. Thomas P. Gilmartin, D-51 Youngstown, which would let the legislature reassert itself over appointed agencies devising rules which have virtually the force of law.

Joining Gilmartin on the legislation was Rep. William G. Batchelder, R-93 Medina, a conservative who supported Ronald Reagan as Ohio's presidential primary last year.

They told the House Governmental Affairs Committee it should approve the measure—vetoed last session by Republican Gov. James A. Rhodes—which gives the legislature the authority to approve or reject the rules of the approximately 300 state agencies appointed by the governor.

Under the existing administrative procedures law, the agencies are empowered to adopt rules which go into effect only after public hearings and an appeals process that may or may not cause them to be changed.

Gilmartin, who saw his bill die the last time after getting the House but not the Senate to override the governor, told the committee the General Assembly has allowed its authority to give way over the years to bureaucrats. "The legislature must control the laws of this state," he said.

Batchelder added that in only six years, the number of rules promulgated by federal agencies has grown from 20,000 pages to 60,000 pages. He said he fears "Ohio is having a similar explosion."

The bill also was supported by the Ohio Association of Realtors whose spokesman, Keith Shoemaker, said his group is hit constantly with complaints from members about "unelected officials governing them."

Gilmartin declined to speculate on the fate of his bill in the Senate this year, if it reaches that chamber. "I hope our fate in the Senate this year will be better," he said.

Sneek-A-Peek

AT BOOKS IN THE CHILDREN'S LIBRARY

Do you like mystery movies? If so, don't miss "Hunted in Holland," this Saturday's free movie in the public library. Share the danger and suspense of a young boy's experiences when he goes to Holland and becomes involved in a jewel theft.

Bring your library card and your other friends! The film will run from 2 to 3 p.m., but come early or stay late for browsing with the lights on!

Younger bibliophiles will enjoy this week's new acquisitions. For starters try "Monkey Face," a humorous story about a Monkey who draws a picture of his mother. On the way home from school, various friends offer suggestions for improving the portrait: Giraffe thinks the neck should be longer, Elephant votes for a larger nose, etc. By the time Monkey gets home to Mother, the picture is much altered, to say the least!

"Could Be Worse!," also a picture book, is about two children who grow tired of Grandpa's pat answer to any problems that befall them. The tables are turned when the book concludes with a droll and very funny ending.

In our Easy Reader section look for "Night Noises and Other Mole and Troll Stories." Here, Mole and Troll come back for four adventures in friendship.

See you Saturday if not before!

FMC Plant Shut Down

SOUTH CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — The FMC Corp. began shutting down its factory here after a federal judge ordered a halt to production and discharge of a chemical that has turned up in the drinking water supplies of Ohio River communities.

The decision to temporarily close the plant, reached Wednesday by U.S. District Judge Charles Haden in Parkersburg, would affect an estimated 1,200 employees, said Bill Currey, an FMC spokesman.

In issuing a 10-day temporary restraining order, Haden indicated he was more worried about the 1.28 million persons who rely on the river for their drinking water.

"I can't ignore that," he said, noting that he had to balance the interests of the FMC employees with the potential public health hazard.

Haden ordered the firm to stop production of carbon tetrachloride, a substance that has been spilled into the Kanawha River and traveled downstream to the Ohio on numerous occasions. He said FMC could place whatever amounts of the chemical it already had on hand in its storage tanks.

The Environmental Protection Agency, which sought the restraining order and a preliminary injunction, claimed the plant had a "repeated history of carbon tetrachloride spills," including 20 such spills in the past two years.

The earliest Americans were Homo sapiens, the same species as modern men and women, not the more primitive peoples whose remains have been found in Africa, Asia, and Europe, according to National Geographic.

Ohio Retail Sales Drop In January

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Retail sales in Ohio declined 33 per cent, or 7 per cent after seasonal adjustment, from December to January, the first recorded drop for that period since 1972, according to the Center for Business Research.

The decrease, from December's record-setting sales, also showed a one per cent decline from the first month of 1976, the first January-to-January decrease since 1970, the center said.

January's severe cold and energy shortages brought increased sales in some areas, despite the overall decline.

Food sales increased 2 to 7 per cent above the year-ago level as Ohioans stockpiled food supplies. A 14 per cent sales increase in the "other automotive" line reflected the gearing up of cars with tires, batteries and other parts for the severe temperatures, the center reported.

The abnormally cold weather also caused a 23 per cent increase over last year in the sale of heating, plumbing and electrical supplies, the center said. And sales of durables such as snow-handling equipment increased hardware store sales where stocks were available.

The largest increase, 59 per cent, occurred in sales of supplementary heating fuels, the center said.

Sales in January dropped from a year ago in all 11 of the city-county areas indexed by the center, but all other areas of Ohio increased fractionally.

January retail sales compared with the same month a year ago were: Akron, down 6 per cent; Canton, down 7; Chillicothe, down 3; Cincinnati, down 7; Cleveland, down 2; Columbus, down 2; Dayton, down 77; Hamilton-Middletown, down 3; Portsmouth down 2; Toledo, down 2; Youngstown, down 10.

Drugs Seen Link In 11 Murders

CINCINNATI (AP) — Police from Ohio and Kentucky were meeting today to look for a common denominator—possibly narcotics—in the murders of 11 young women since 1975.

Jack Leach, chief investigator for Hamilton County Coroner Frank Cleveland, who arranged the meeting, confirmed that a May 1976 seizure of a boat containing 9½ tons of marijuana in Mississippi might be a possible link. "One of our purposes is to see if this could be, in fact, a common tie,"

Leach said. But Leach said the primary purpose of the meeting is to share investigation material on all the slayings to determine if there are common threads that might link them together.

All the bodies were found in rural areas, most were nude or partially nude. Leach said the original estimate of 16 was reduced to 11 when five were eliminated through being solved or having no apparent similarity. Cleveland's office conducted all the autopsies on a cooperative basis.

Cleveland said two of the 11 have been solved but were included in the probe because of similarities to the other nine cases.

Kentucky State police, the Ohio Bureau of Criminal Investigation and Cincinnati police homicide squad were invited. Other authorities and the numbers of killings under investigation in their districts are: Hamilton County, three; Clermont County, two; and one each in Butler, Warren and Clinton counties.

Leach said he would neither confirm nor deny the list of the victims published Wednesday by The Cincinnati Enquirer.

The list included: Hamilton County: Mary Ruth Hopkins, 21, Cincinnati, June 30, 1976; Linda Dyer, 15, Cincinnati, Aug. 24, 1976; Dorothy Sullivan, 18, Cincinnati, Aug. 28, Earl Elder, Cincinnati, was convicted in the Sullivan case and sentenced to 25 years.

Kentucky: Susan Gorman, 19, Cincinnati, Dec. 3, 1975. Carol Sue Klaber, 16, Fort Wright, June 5, 1976 and an unidentified woman found April 17, 1976 in Grant County. John Boyd, 49, Middletown, a mental patient, was convicted for the Gorman slaying.

Clermont County: Linda Kay Harmon, 17, Forestville, Sept. 2, 1975; Nancy Grigsby, 23, Winterville, May 9, 1976.

Clermont County: Cora Ellen Durham, also known as Tanya Ellen King, 27, Cincinnati, June 20.

Butler County: Victoria Hinchey, 24, Cincinnati, Oct. 31, 1976.

Clinton County: Elaina Bear, 15, Cincinnati, Feb. 28, 1977.

Leach said Montgomery County authorities asked to attend the meeting as observers.

Heart Transplants Less Than Hoped

CINCINNATI (AP) — The heart transplant proved to be an experiment where expectations exceeded the result, according to Dr. Michael DeBakey, one of the pioneers in heart surgery.

"It was accepted more in the public area than it ever was in the scientific area," Dr. DeBakey told a press conference here Wednesday.

The head of the department of surgery at the Baylor College of Medicine said the method was "never considered by medical authorities to be the answer to heart disease."

"It was an experiment by a number of people who felt it could be done. The only way we could determine if it could be done in humans was to do it in humans," said DeBakey, who performed the last of his 12 transplants five years ago.

"The justification was that some kinds of heart diseases were terminal in a very short time and the transplant might extend the life expectancy."

"With the proper safeguards we thought we might be able to try it, but the experiment didn't appear sufficiently useful to continue."

None of the recipients of heart transplants he operated on is still alive, DeBakey said.

Reports that Dr. Christian Barnard—the pioneer of the heart transplant—planned to use baboon hearts as an auxiliary heart to support the original diseased heart were treated with skepticism by DeBakey.

"In general, transplants from another species produce more violent reactions than those of the same species," he said.

He predicted that by the end of the century he had hopes that an artificial heart could be created which would be able to work alone.

Bits Of Bone Prove Puzzling

MEDINA, Ohio (AP) — Medina County authorities said Wednesday the bones and teeth found near a Hinckley Lake boathouse were determined to be of human origin, but Cuyahoga County authorities disagreed.

A Cuyahoga County official who declined identification said the remains appeared to be those of a dog.

A bit of bone said to be part of a skull was given to a Case Western Reserve University anthropologist for further study.

Universities Seek Coal Project

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Representatives of Ohio University have plugged their campus as the ideal site for a research center to find wider uses for the state's high sulfur coal.

President Charles J. Ping, G. Kenner Bush, OU trustee and editor and publisher of the Athens

Messenger, and Robert L. Savage, chemical engineering professor, testified Wednesday before a House subcommittee.

The panel is considering a bill by Rep. Arthur Bowers, D-98 Steubenville, which increases the severance tax on coal by two cents a ton to provide $1 million a year for the envisioned center.

Bowers provides in his bill that the facility would be established on the Athens campus, but the university now finds itself in heated competition with Ohio State University in Columbus.

The subcommittee, headed by Rep. Irene B. Smart, D-49 Canton, is expected to visit the Ohio State campus next week as debate over site selection continues.

Donald D. Glower, dean of the OSU College of Engineering, and other officials of that institution urged the subcommittee last week to choose Columbus, saying OSU already is involved in extensive research on coal.

However, Ping and the other Ohio University spokesmen said Wednesday that a major reason to locate the center there is its proximity to Ohio's coal producing region. "There are deep mines and surface mines within minutes of the campus," the president said.

He also said the OU also has extensive research projects under way, although none involve coal, and showed it can move "timely and effectively" under a legislative mandate. He cited the new OU College of Osteopathic Medicine as an example.

Bush also stressed the proximity of the coal region in a state that leads the nation in consumption of coal and ranks as its fifth largest producers. Thousands of jobs in Ohio's Appalachia counties depend on coal, he said.

Bush said it is obvious that industry in Ohio will use coal one way or the other. "If they don't use ours, they'll use someone else's," he said, adding that if ways are not found to use Ohio's coal "we are going to put many of our miners on unemployment."

Judge Cline Speaks To VFW Members

Twelve persons were present at the monthly meeting of the Pickaway County Volunteers for Youth Wednesday evening at the home of Diane Berger.

Probate Court Judge Guy Cline was the guest for the evening. He discussed with members the various phases of the Juvenile Court system and how the volunteer can best fit in while working with a young person on probation.

One subject discussed in depth concerned school truancy and how to deal with it outside the Juvenile Court system. Judge Cline explained that area schools deal with the truancy situation and some of the steps he has and is currently taking with this growing problem.

The volunteers were introduced to the new probation officer, Brent Johnson.

One final suggestion concerning the possibility of an emergency shelter was made by the Probation Department. This concerns youths, 15 years of age and under, who are possibly in violation of the law or neglected, and cannot be placed in a jail. They would then be placed in a volunteers home overnight or for the weekend until their court appearance or their parents are located.

Again, a plea was made for more volunteers, especially in the county. Persons wishing further information on becoming a volunteer should contact Ramona Edman at 474-7927 or call Diane Berger at 474-6900.

Precious Wealth

You are richer today than you were yesterday if you have laughed often, given something, forgiven even more, made a new friend today, or made stepping stones of stumbling blocks; if you have thought more in terms of "thysself" than of "myself," or if you have managed to be cheerful even if you were weary. You are richer tonight than you were this morning — if you have taken time to trace the handiwork of God in the common place things of life, or if you have learned to count out the things that really do not count, or if you have been a little blinder to the faults of a friend, or foe. You are richer if a little child has smiled at you, and a stray dog has licked your hand, or if you have looked for the best in others, and have given others the best in you.

Judge Ammer Sentences Two Men To Reformatory

Two men were sentenced to terms in the Mansfield Reformatory Wednesday by Common Pleas Court Judge William Ammer.

Paul Daniels, 27, Columbus, was given a 4 to 25 year term after he pled guilty to a charge of aggravated burglary.

Authorities apparently had problems locating Daniels, who appeared on a Bill of Information after waiving a Grand Jury hearing.

He was charged Feb. 28, 1975, with entering a home in the west-central part of the county with the intent to commit a theft offense.

Tyler L. Burns, 19, Columbus, was sentenced to concurrent 6 month to 5 year terms in the Mansfield Reformatory after he pled guilty March 2 to breaking and entering and theft of drugs.

He was charged Nov. 1 with breaking into a local doctor's office and unlawfully obtaining drugs.

Trial dates were set on three men, who entered not guilty pleas to a variety of charges.

Trial for Richard Allen Hooks, Williamsport, has been set for April 18, and Judge Ammer set bond at $20,000 plus recognizance.

Hooks, who was indicted Feb. 27, 1976, turned himself into Pickaway County Sheriff Dwight Radcliff March 9.

Groucho Marx Having Good Time

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Groucho Marx may be in the hospital recuperating from hip surgery but the 86-year-old comedian is reported to be having a wonderful time, a family spokesman said. And some of the nurses at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center are joining in by wearing Groucho Marx T-shirts.

Marx entered the hospital Friday for surgery to insert a new right hip joint. Pains in his leg, which troubled him during a dinner with actor Elliott Gould, have subsided since the surgery to correct a floating fracture of the hip.

"I'll do anything to miss my cook's food," Marx quipped after entering the hospital, the spokesman said Wednesday.

Urge Registration Of Watercraft

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — With the advent of spring, the Department of Natural Resources urges boaters to register their watercraft early.

According to Norv Hall, chief of DNR's watercraft division, the department is working to eliminate some of the red tape involving registering boats.

DNR is preparing legislation which will allow boaters to renew their registrations by mail every three years. The new legislation also eliminates the registration of outboard motors.

He is charged with arson and three counts of receiving stolen property.

He was charged Jan. 10, 1976, with intentionally setting fire to a pick-up truck, and Jan. 28, Feb. 10, and Feb. 13, with receiving hogs, lights, and tools which he knew or should have known were stolen.

Trial date for Charles Albert Foster, 11610 Poplar St., Ashville, will be April 25.

Foster, indicted by the Grand Jury Feb. 18, is charged with perjury. According to the indictment, Foster knowingly made a false statement under oath during an official proceeding in Municipal Court Dec. 8.

Trial date for Fred Seaton Jr., Stoutsville, will be April 29, Bond was set at $5,000 after Seaton pled not guilty to charges of receiving stolen property and failure to appear on a recognizance bond.

He was indicted by the Grand Jury Jan. 21 for receiving a stereo which he knew or should have known was stolen.

Judge Ammer suspended a prison term he imposed on a local man and placed him on probation for three years.

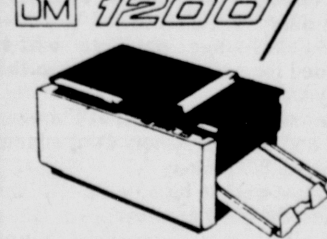

Kevin Lee Pennington, 2854 Walnut Creek Pike, was given probation after he was sentenced to a 6 month to 5 year term in the Mansfield Reformatory on a charge of receiving stolen property.

He was charged Dec. 24 with receiving a television set, gun, and radio which he knew or should have known were stolen.

In ordering probation, Judge Ammer ruled that Pennington must seek necessary counseling.

Judge Ammer also denied a motion for shock probation filed by Bruce W. London, Chillicothe.

Trials Held In Kidnap Of Niehaus

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — President Carlos Andres Perez has ordered that military trial continue for four men, including two Venezuelan congressmen, accused of participation in the year-old kidnapping of American glass company executive William F. Niehaus.

The four men, arrested last August, are Congressman Salom Meza, a member of the leftist Peoples Electoral Movement, Congressman Fortunato Herrera, an independent, David Nieves and Ivan Padilla.

They are accused of military rebellion in the case, in which armed men, some dressed in military uniforms, drugged and abducted Niehaus, 46, of Toledo, Ohio, from his suburban Caracas home Feb. 27, 1976.

Although authorities have said all participants in the kidnap case have been either arrested or identified, no trace has been reported of Niehaus, who managed Venezuelan operations for the Toledo-based Owens-Illinois Glass manufacturing group.

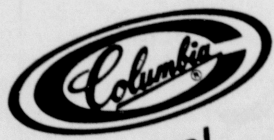

Authorities have not revealed details of the alleged involvement of the four men in the kidnapping.

Unofficial sources have indicated Herrera attempted to serve as a contact between the kidnapers and Owens-Illinois, while Nieves and Padilla were captured following an abortive attempt to collect an advance payment on a $3.4 million ransom demand.

Execution Date Set For Springfield Man

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A May 9 execution day has been set by the Supreme Court for a Springfield man convicted of murder largely on the basis of fingerprints found near the scene of a shooting death.

In a 5-2 decision Wednesday, the court upheld the murder, aggravated robbery and burglary conviction of George W. Miller, implicated in the shooting death of a department store maintenance man.

Police found Shirley Craycraft lying in the aisle of the Twin Fair Store with gunshot wounds in the head and neck shortly before 3 a.m. on Aug. 13, 1975.

Near the scene they found a paper sack filled with merchandise from the store and at the rear entrance they found a hacksaw and its carton. All bore the accused man's fingerprints.

But it was never established that the hacksaw was used to force open the locks, which had been jarred loose by some device. And no murder weapon or stolen goods were found in Miller's possession.

The court majority said the fingerprints were "sufficient proof of his identity to sustain his conviction where the circumstances show that such prints, found at the scene of the crime, could only have been impressed at the time of the commission of the crime."

Miller worked at the store for one month in 1972, according to testimony given by the store manager.

More than 20 individuals have been given dates with the electric chair since the high court began its review of death row cases last November.

Dissenting justices William B. Brown and Paul Brown said the majority opinion was based on circumstantial evidence that did not exclude "every reasonable hypothesis except that of guilt."

Writing for the minority, William B. Brown noted that the paper sack, the hacksaw and its cardboard package, which also showed Miller's fingerprints, were accessible to any person who shopped in the store.

William Brown said the evidence could link Miller to an overnight robbery, or burglary of which he was also convicted, but asserted it did "not directly tie Miller to the murder."

Jeep Strike Continues

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

American Motors Corp. officials say there are no immediate plans to reopen contract negotiations with a striking United Auto Workers local at the firm's Toledo Jeep plant.

"We negotiated a contract in good faith... The whole matter rests in the union's hands," a company spokesman said Wednesday.

The 4,600-member UAW Local 12 rejected the proposed pact by a 130-vote margin on Monday. The old contract, which expired Jan. 31, had been extended on a day-to-day basis before the local struck Tuesday.

Union officials could not be reached for comment, but union members apparently were dissatisfied with the three-year wage package which provided for a 41-cent increase in the first year.

Meanwhile, UAW strikes at Chrysler Corp. and General Motors Corp. plants continued Wednesday.

And last-minute bargaining sessions between the UAW and officials at GM's Janesville, Wis. assembly plant reportedly were stalled by disagreements over grievance procedures, job assignments, department transfers and safety regulations.

Sanitarians Face Licensing

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Sanitarians, hired by local government agencies to inspect restaurants and other places that serve food, would have to be licensed, under a bill given last week 60-33 support by the House.

Sponsored by Rep. Frederick H. Deering, D-84 Monroeville, it aims at preventing untrained individuals from working in the field of environmental health.

But freshman Rep. Robert D. Corbin, R-38 Dayton, called creation of another agency Wednesday an "exercise in futility." He said he has attended a recent committee hearing considering a Democratic-sponsored bill that would eliminate 187 existing boards, commissions and bureaus.

Terrorist Actions Condemned

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — The president of the American-Arab Relations Committee has condemned the action of terrorists who invaded a Jewish organization and two other buildings in Washington on Wednesday and held scores of hostages.

Dr. M.T. Mehdi said the invasions, apparently by members of the Hanafi Moslem sect, "violate the spirit of Islam."

In a telegram to the B'nai B'rith headquarters in New York, Mehdi offered to go to Washington today to try to help secure the release of more than 100 hostages being held by riflemen in the organization's offices.

Earlier, Mehdi, who is touring the Midwest, told a news conference President Carter is "beginning to eat his words about the Arab embargo."

"If you'll notice his stand as a candidate and those as President aren't the same," Mehdi said. "Before he made threats to impose the embargo, now he's saying that he won't take any steps to prevent American companies from doing business with the Arabs."

Mehdi said Carter was forced to back down from his position, "otherwise he will force America out of a growing Asian market."

Mehdi cautioned that the future of America is linked to Asia, "a new world frontier for humanity." He said the Asian market will generate more than $200 billion over the next five years and America could be forced out of the trade market by supporting the Israeli regime.

Mehdi's stop in Dayton was one of four scheduled on a tour through the Midwest to meet with Arab-American leaders and American Arabists to organize their efforts to influence President Carter's foreign policy on the Palestinian-Israeli situation.

Other cities on his tour include College Park and Pittsburgh, Pa., and Indianapolis.

Mort Sahl Drops Lawsuit Plans

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — He's not exactly burying the hatchet, but comedian Mort Sahl says he's giving up the idea of a lawsuit against entertainer Frank Sinatra.

"I'm trying to give the courts a better press," Sahl said in a telephone interview Wednesday.

Sinatra sued Sahl in Los Angeles Superior Court in 1974, claiming Sahl had only paid off half of a $20,000 loan made 10 years earlier.

The suit was filed a month after Sahl had commented on Sinatra's attacks on a Hollywood gossip columnist.

Sahl's attorney, Ronald H. Rouda, said then that Sahl was considering a countersuit. But Sinatra's case was dismissed when he refused to give a deposition last January.

Asked on Wednesday if he plans to try to reactivate his friendship with Sinatra, Sahl said, "Not especially."

Marion Steinhauer and his family at Winter Haven and with daughter Peg and her husband Paul Fulton at Ft. Lauderdale. Peg is slowly recovering from recent open heart surgery. One of the really nice things to happen while Emma was in Florida was the promotion of Marion to vice president and manager of the Cypress Gardens office of the Barnett Banks. Marion began his banking career several years ago here in our village at the former Farmers National Bank which is now a branch office of the First National Bank of Circleville. The Steinhauers have been in Florida for nearly ten years. Emma also spent time with other friends that she and her late husband Harry had known in past years when they wintered in Florida. Another highlight of her winter hiatus was to attend the Florida Citrus Showcase, a festival type affair, where she had the opportunity to see and meet Phyllis Diller.

Headlining the bill will be The Hopper Brothers and Connie of Madison, North Carolina, Willie Wynne and the Tennesseans from Nashville, Dixie Melody Boys also from North Carolina and the very popular local group, The Crusaders Quartet who will have advance tickets, too. As we have reported in past years, the Men's Club uses funds provided by the Gospel Sing to further community development. We urge you to support them.

Some of the spark plug members to contact to arrange for consignment are Bobbie Oesterle, Mike Tarbill, Jerry Wilt, Bill Oesterle, Tom Barnes, Clark Hunsicker III and Robert I. Barnes. More names in future columns who will be glad to offer assistance.

Baseball's Rose, Tiant Still Among Unsigned

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Mark Fidrych picked up where he left off last season, pitching three scoreless innings for the Detroit Tigers in a 5-4 exhibition opener against the Boston Red Sox, but there was discontent at Cincinnati's camp as the Reds' 10-time All-Star third baseman Pete Rose refused to sign his contract. In the Detroit-Boston game Wednesday at Winter Haven, Fla., Jason Thompson, Ben Oglivie and Mickey Stanley cracked home runs for the Tigers. Fidrych, the American League's Rookie of the Year who won 19 games last year, gave up only three hits in three innings. At Tampa, Fla., Rose said he wouldn't sign, and decreed what he called a lack of appreciation by the Reds for his dedication. He said he might play out his option because of the bitter salary dispute. "Why are they negotiating on the date of my birth rather than on my batting average?" said the 36-year-old Rose, who has batted .300 in 12 of his last 12 years.

Rose has played 2,184 games in his 17-year career with the Reds' organization. And there was just as much bitterness in Boston, where pitching ace Luis Tiant said he might go back to Mexico after failing to come to terms with the Red Sox on his demand for an extension of his contract and a no-cut clause.

"The way I'm feeling right now is I'll go home," he said. "I've had enough." His contract runs through the 1977 season and he wants it stretched another year. He had asked for a three-year contract but said he had negotiated most recently for just two. At the Montreal Expos' Daytona Beach, Fla., spring training camp,

Canadiens, Leafs Tie

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Hands are not exactly reaching for the panic button, but there is an element of concern among the Montreal Canadiens ... now that they are winless in two whole games.

"A loss and a tie hasn't happened to us in another instance," said Montreal goalie Ken Dryden after the Toronto Maple Leafs came back twice for a 2-2 deadlock with the Canadiens Wednesday night.

"We're lacking a little of our zip right now," said veteran Montreal right wing Jim Roberts. "We came off the winning streak with the loss to Buffalo and it's taking us a little while to get back."

The loss to Buffalo Sunday night ended the Canadiens' near-record unbeaten string at 21 games — the longest in the National Hockey League this season. But now Montreal is staggering through one of its worst slumps of the season; only once had they been winless in two games.

"It's a little upsetting," said Dryden. Meanwhile, the New York Rangers defeated the Minnesota North Stars 6-4, the New York Islanders beat the Atlanta Flames 6-2, the Buffalo Sabres downed the Detroit Red Wings 6-3, the Vancouver Canucks bested the Washington Capitals 5-2, and the Pittsburgh Penguins topped the Colorado Rockies 3-0.

team management invoked the automatic renewal clause on infielder Rodney Scott's contract, completing the team's 40-man roster for 1977. At St. Petersburg, Fla., veteran catcher Jerry Grote signed a one-year contract with the New York Mets for a reported $125,000. His signing leaves Dave Kingman the only holdout. Kingman is seeking $3 million over five years.

The Chicago White Sox handed renewal contracts to Ken Brett, Jim Essian and Wayne Nordhagen and club Vice President Roland Hemond promised others would be coming. For Brett, at least, no salary cut was involved. The Cleveland Indians completed their signings when Bill Melton came to terms on a one-year contract. The Phillies signed rookies Rick Bosetti, an outfielder, and Jim Morrison, a third baseman, to three-year contracts, leaving Philadelphia with eight unsigned players.

Braves Girls Beat Rockets In Finale

Logan Elm's girls ended their season on a winning note as they stopped Berne Union, 53-39, on the Braves' court.

The Braves led 20-8 at the end of the first quarter, 36-12 at halftime and 49-25 at the third period buzzer.

Debbie Larson led Logan Elm with 12 points, Beth Bell added 11, Patty Larson and Susan Delong each netted six, Diane Martin hooped five, Jackie Cave tallied four, Annette Roof hit three, Krista Gifford and Cheryl Hawkins both hit two while Kami Poling and Tina Woods each had one.

Brenda Bell, Krista Luckhart, Carla Roof, Lisa Watson and Marie Goodchild came off the bench and turned in some fine floor work.

Logan Elm finished the year with an overall mark of 3-7 and 2-7 in the Mid State League.

Stingers Beat Oilers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Dennis Sobchuk was known as one of the most productive scorers in the history of junior hockey in western Canada. Now, with the Cincinnati Stingers of the World Hockey Association, he is beginning to forge the same kind of reputation.

Sobchuk ran his WHA career total to 100 goals Wednesday night as the Stingers recorded a 5-3 triumph over the Edmonton Oilers.

Teamed on a line with rookies Peter Marsh and Jamie Hislop, Sobchuk figured in all five Cincinnati goals, scoring two and assisting on three more.

In other games, the Calgary Cowboys edged the San Diego Mariners 4-3, and the Birmingham Bulls scored a 4-3 triumph over the New England Whalers on Jeff Jacques' overtime goal.

Sobchuk's 100th goal, his second of the game and 36th of the season, came at 15:31 of the third period — only 16 seconds after he had set up Marsh for the game's winning goal.

Southwest Ohio Cage Stars Selected

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Coach Ron Holtrey and his star Lebanon player, Jim Rhoden, have won The Associated Press' main honors this season in Ohio Southwestern District high school basketball.

Holtrey guided Lebanon to 18 straight triumphs this season and a district panel of sports writers tapped him for the Southwestern Class AAA Coach of the Year crown.

Rhoden, a 6-foot-6 senior who averaged 20.7 points and 13 rebounds, earned the area AAA Player of the Year honors. Rhoden, highly sought by colleges, led Lebanon to a 39-1 record going into this year's tournaments.

Dave McCurdy, a 6-1 Springfield Catholic star with 22 points and 12 rebounds per contest, and 6-1 Carlisle senior Eddie Crowe, hitting 22 points a game, shared the Southwestern Class AA Player of the Year award.

Bob Veltan of Reading, with no starters taller than 6-2, guided his team to a 15-3 record and the Hamilton County National championship. His lineup was an untested senior, two juniors and two sophomores. That earned him area AA Coach of the Year.

The Class A district honors went to 6-1 Arcanum senior Kevin O'Dell, 23.2 points per game, as the No. 1 player and Coach Jack Young, who is turning New Miami's program around. Young was 4-15 in his first season and 10-8 this time in his second try.

Circleville, Teays Valley Ready For Sectional Fight

Both Circleville Coach Joy O'Brien and Teays Valley Coach Angie Rinehart expect nothing but the best from their cagers when the Tigers and the Vikings square off tonight on the opening round of the Class AA Sectional Tournament at Pickerington.

The winner of the 7 p.m. contest will battle the winner of the West Jefferson-London contest in the tourney finals Saturday night.

Both teams are winners of their respective cage leagues. Circleville, after dropping its opening game of the season to the Vikings, have won 13 straight and walked off with the South Central Ohio League crown.

And Teays Valley, which lost two games all year, finished as co-champions of the Metro League.

"With both teams having extremely fine seasons, we expect a hard-played game," said Coach O'Brien. "We have improved tremendously since our season opener and expect to give them a better game."

"Not only is this a tournament game, but it will also be another fine county rivalry," she said.

Coach Rinehart said her players are looking forward to the battle with the Tigers.

"Most of the teams we've played this year have one or two key players. But I think our two squads play very well as teams," she said.

Fans looking for a key to the game should pay attention to the backboards, according to Coach Rinehart.

Circleville's board strength comes from 6-foot senior Sue Stevenson, 5-11 junior Sue Frericks, and 5-8 junior Natalie Martin.

The Vikes will counter with 5-7 senior Perri Martin, 5-8 junior Florie Mesner, 5-8 senior Suzy Jones, and 5-7 sophomore Shelley Marion.

While the Vikes will be giving up some inches, Coach Rinehart has been working on variations of her offense and defense to give maximum rebounding potential at all times.

Look for good, strong zone defenses from both teams, and some fast-paced presses.

Circleville will start Sue Frericks, Sue Stevenson, and Natalie Martin around the basket and Sue Radcliff and Kathy Fanale on the perimeter. Wanda Boyd and Michelle Nolan are Coach O'Brien's usual first choices off the bench.

Coach Rinehart remains undecided about her starting players. Prime candidates are Debbie Baxter, Perri Martin, Rita Slone, Suzy Jones, Florie Mesner, Shelley Marion, and P.J. Stiles.

"We have worked hard for the last week," O'Brien said, "and expect to execute a few phases of the game better than we did in our first meeting."

And Rinehart expects to have a "few surprises" cooked up for the Tigers.

76ers Edge Nuggets; Win 129-125

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

The red, white and blue ball and the three-point basket are things of the past, but the American Basketball Association lives on.

Julius Erving squared off against David Thompson Wednesday night in a matchup of two of the old ABA's brightest stars. Erving lost the battle 40-38, but he won the war.

Erving's Philadelphia 76ers trimmed Thompson's Denver Nuggets 129-125 in a double overtime thriller between two of the National Basketball Association's strongest clubs. And Erving said the victory might have given Denver something to think about.

"They're definitely one of the best clubs in the league, but they've got to respect us because we've beaten them three out of four," said Erving, who sent the game into overtime by scoring on a bank shot, a dunk and two free throws in the final 70 seconds of regulation play, wiping out a six-point Denver lead.

Philadelphia took the lead for good on a jumper by Doug Collins with 2:42 to go in the second overtime. A jumper by Thompson that would have tied the score with 15 seconds left bounced off the rim.

Erving's 38 points were his season's high, while Thompson's 40 tied his top output of the season.

Elsewhere in the NBA Wednesday night, the Seattle SuperSonics routed the Boston Celtics 114-86, the Milwaukee Bucks edged the Washington Bullets 109-107 and the Houston Rockets beat the Phoenix Suns 105-100.

Westfall Middle Cagers End Season

Westfall Middle School junior high cagers ended their season Wednesday with a win over London on the loser's court.

Westfall led 4-2, 19-10 and 26-24 at the quarters.

Theresa Stonerock led the young Mustangs with 12 points, Sheri Somers added 10, Mindy Neff netted six, Darci Aukman and Melissa Azbell each had four while Vicki Mettler tallied two.

Also performing well for the Mustangs were: Susan Schillings, Lori Metzger, Cheryl Meyers, Kim Lindsey, Karen Southern, Dena Galloway, Barb Downing, Tami Roberts, Tracy Stonerock, Rita Beard, Kris Metzger and Valli Mowery.

Westfall dropped a tough 27-25 to Greenview in the Greenview Junior High Tournament Tuesday.

Boat Ties Available

Anyone wishing to renew their boat tie-up stake permit at Deer Creek State Park should do so by March 31st. This applies only to those who had a tie-up stake last year. Any stake not sold by March 31st will be up for rent on a first come-first serve basis starting April 1st. The 1977 boat and motor license registration is required to rent a tie-up stake at any time. The park office does not sell the license registration. They may be obtained at many of the boat or motor dealers or sporting goods stores.

Time For Fishing Tackle Tips

By JIM DAUBEL
For The Associated Press
March is the month for fishing tackle tips.
There's time to repair and replace gear now that ice fishing is fading and spring awaits its turn among seasons.
Likely in need of most attention is the box full of lures that is so much used and abused during the warm weather months.
Many of us could start by dropping about half the bulging contents of those boxes into the nearest trash can.

'The Bird' Flaky As Always

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — "The Bird" is back — flighty and flaky as ever but totally unspoiled.
"My head must have left my body," said Mark "The Bird" Fidrych, trying to explain an uncharacteristic lapse into absent-mindedness in his 1977 pitching debut for the Detroit Tigers.
The 22-year-old rookie of the year, whose strong right arm and bizarre histrionics on the mound made him a national folk hero last season, pitched three scoreless innings, allowing three hits, as the Tigers beat the Boston Red Sox 5-4 Wednesday in baseball's spring opener.
He forgot and left his cap in the dugout at the start of the second inning. At the end of the inning he ran off the field after the second out, thinking the side was retired. He grabbed the wrong cap when he went to the mound in the third inning, and a bat boy rushed out to make the exchange.
"I heard somebody yell, 'Get your head screwed on, dummy,'" Fidrych said. "I don't know what happened to me. I guess I was too involved. I was thinking too much about the game. I was pumping too hard."
"The Bird" is always pumping — that's his trademark.

More than 4,000 fans had assembled at the Red Sox Chain O'Lakes Park when Fidrych and his teammates arrived by bus from nearby Lakeland an hour before game time. Traffic was jammed up for miles, delaying the arrival of American League President Lee MacPhail.
Hand-made signs dotted the stands: "Welcome to the Bird," "The Bird is back," "We love the Bird."
In the lockerroom, the 6-foot-2 stringbean with the shock of blond corkscrews for hair was greeted by a battery of newsmen from all around the training circuit.
"No pictures, no interviews before the game," the young pitcher said. "I've got to think."
Once outside, however, he could not turn his back on his adoring army, ranging from kids to grandpas, pleading for autographs.
"I've never seen anything like it — this kid is the greatest draw in baseball," said Hal Middlesworth, Detroit director of public relations. "He started 29 games for us last year, drew 901,239 — an average of 31,077 — a regular magnet."
The free-spirited native of Worcester, Mass., has brought a breath of fresh air to a game bogged down with labor strife and lawsuits, putting on the best show in town last year while compiling a 19-9 record and leading the major league with an earned run average of 2.34.
His father is Polish, his mother Danish and he is the lone son among three sisters. He drove a pickup truck to the ball park until a Detroit motor company gave him a new sports car and the Tigers raised his salary from $16,500 at the start of last year to a three-year graduating scale of $50,000-$75,000-$100,000.

Somebody asked him if he feared, because of his wide publicity, he might start getting hammy and cocky.
"Me? Not a chance. I've been this way all my life. I can't change."

Wrestling Tourney Set

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Only Summit Station Licking Heights has a solid chance to keep its team championship in the 40th Ohio high school wrestling meet Friday and Saturday.
The Licking County power has the most qualifiers—nine—of any of the three division contenders. Licking Heights rolled up 65½ points to 52 for runnerup Richmond Heights for the Class A title last year.
Class AAA Cleveland Heights and Class AA Mantua Crestwood, the other 1976 team winners, have little chance to repeat based on state meet entries.
The big school battle in Ohio State's St. John Arena appears to be among Macedonia Nordonia, Cincinnati Oak Hills, Cleveland St. Joseph and Galloway Westland.
Nordonia leads with eight qualifiers, one more than Cincinnati Oak Hills and Cleveland St. Joseph and two more than Galloway Westland.

Manager Bill Virdon of the Houston Astros likes to go quail hunting. Players named him "The Quail" when he played for Pittsburgh.

Shortstop Larry Bowa of the Phillies is a switch hitter but does better average-wise from the left-handed hitting stance.

Fishermen are accumulators. Convinced that even the wildest looking lure may someday come in handy, we squirrel them away with pounds of other hardware spared by the same logic.
Over the years I have found if I didn't use a bait last year I probably won't next year, or probably ever if the truth were known. Consequently, I junk it (rarely) or store it at home (usually).

Once you've thinned out old tackle, make an inventory of what items need replacing. Likely candidates include such things as splitshot, barrel and snap swivels, hooks, porkrind baits, plastic worms, rubber lure skirts and that supply of spare reel parts.
Add to your list of things to buy before spring such tackle as replacement lures, monofilament line and larger items like boots, landing nets, rain gear, rods and reels.

Once everything is on paper you are better able to set priorities on what is needed and affordable.
The successful angler invests a lot of time in his tackle before each fishing season. The rest of us do the least, hope the most, and usually manage to get by.

In addition to discarding and replacing, artificial lures should be examined closely, cleaned of rust and corrosion, and repaired where necessary. Hooks should be sharpened or replaced if they are badly rusted.
As expensive as quality monofilament is these days it is painful indeed to throw it away. Tackle companies recommend new line every year but, for the average fisherman, that is not necessary.
Plastic line does take a "set" after being on a spool for a year or more. It also hardens somewhat and loses its stretch capability. But year-old mono certainly is usable so long as you understand that it will be more difficult to cast and probably won't hold up as well under stress.
The ardent bass, muskie or walleye angler will replace mono at least once a year. The occasional weekend fishermen who tightlines for lightweights like panfish need not be so particular.

Rods and reels should get a careful once-over. Most spinning reels can be stripped down easily for cleaning and lubrication. Casting reels are a bit more complicated. I rarely disassemble a reel completely, although some people recommend it. Removing the face plate usually affords adequate access for the extent of cleaning and lubrication required for reels used under normal conditions.
Check rods for cracks or signs of stress and guides and tip-tops for roughness that is a sign of wear. Replace where necessary.
Tackle repairs are a ritual for some fishermen, a pain for others. If nothing else, it helps get the juices flowing again in anticipation of spring.

Drake Top MAC Player

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Central Michigan's leading scorer, Leonard Drake, has been named the Mid-American Player of the Week for his three-game performance in the Chippewas' final drive to the league's co-championship and NCAA tourney berth.
Drake, a 6-foot-2, 174-pound senior, scored 58 points in the three road wins for the Chippewas over Northern Illinois, Bowling Green and Ohio University.
Drake, of Niles Mich., gave his best performance against the Falcons at Bowling Green when he hit 13 of 20 from the field and added eight of nine from the foul line for 34 points in the 94-91 victory.
Also nominated for the award, the final one of its kind this basketball season, were Bowling Green's Ron Hammye, Eastern Michigan's Bill Harris, Archie Aldridge of Miami, Matt Hicks of Northern Illinois, Toledo's Stan Joplin and Tom Cutter of Western Michigan.

65 Points Still Roberts Loser

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
"Sixty-five points don't mean a thing because we lost," said a dejected Anthony Roberts, whose record 65-point output could not prevent a 90-89 loss by Oral Roberts to Oregon in an opening-round game of the National Invitation Tournament.

The 6-foot-6 senior connected on 25 field goals and 15 free throws Wednesday night, breaking the NIT record of 53 points by George Mikan in 1945.
In other NIT opening-round games, Virginia Tech beat Georgetown 83-79, Villanova defeated Old Dominion 71-68 in overtime and Houston edged Indiana State 83-82.
Virginia Tech rallied from a 40-37 intermission deficit against Georgetown, and along with the other winners, earned a berth in next week's NIT quarter-finals at Madison Square Garden, against the winner of tonight's Alabama-Memphis State game. Virginia Tech won the NIT title in 1973.

Villanova trailed Old Dominion's Monarchs for most of the game before inching ahead late in the second half. The score was tied 65-65 at the end of regulation.
Houston's victory lifted the Cougars into the quarter-finals against Illinois State, which defeated Creighton 65-58 Tuesday night.
Oregon's Ernie Kent, one of four players assigned to defense Anthony Roberts, shouted "Unbelievable!" as he watched the Titans' star continually fire the ball through the basket.
Oregon took the lead after a 40-40 halftime tie as forward Greg Ballard scored 43 points, helping offset Roberts' one-man show.
In the Virginia Tech-Georgetown game, the Gobblers grabbed the lead on a layup by Marshall Ashford with 14:04 remaining. A drive by Ron Bell and two free throws by Phil Thieneman built the margin to 55-50.

Ashford hit 16 of his 24 points in the second half. Georgetown got a game-high 28 points from Derrick Johnson. The Hoyas twice closed the gap to two points in the final three minutes.
Villanova, 21-9, trailed by as many as 11 points against the Monarchs but pulled even on a field goal by Whitey Rigby with 4:53 to go. A 20-footer by Old Dominion's Jeff Fuhrmann with 1:05 left forced the game into overtime.

In the extra period, Larry Herron's two free throws with 3:45 remaining clinched the victory for the Wildcats.
Houston led by as many as 10 points in the second half against Indiana State but the Sycamores outscored the Cougars 12-2 over a late three-minute span.
With one minute left, Indiana State's Larry Bird tied the score 82-82. With 37 seconds remaining, though, the Sycamores' Dan Rutledge fouled Mike Schultz, who made his first shot but missed the second. Bird got the ball under the basket but his jump shot bounced off the rim as the buzzer sounded.

Houston goes to the quarterfinals 27-7.
In other college basketball action, the University of North Carolina-Charlotte edged New Orleans 71-70 for the championship in the first Sun Belt Tournament. Jacksonville, N.C., rolled over Georgia State 102-72 in the consolation game.
Willie Stargell, slugging first baseman for the Pittsburgh Pirates, is a native of Earlsboro, Okla.
Tom Seaver of the New York Mets has turned in 38 shutouts in his 10 seasons with the National Leaguers.

Muhammad Ali, for the slayings of his children and demanded that authorities turn the Muslims over to him. In addition to Ali, he listed as Muslim leaders Wallace D. Muhammad, now head of the movement; his brother, Herbert Muhammad, and former Philadelphia Muslim leader Jeremiah Muslim Shabazz.

Other demands made by Abdul Khaalis during the telephone conversations were: —That authorities turn over the murderers of Malcolm X, who like Khaalis was a member of the Black Muslims before breaking with them.

—The return of a $750 fine assessed against him for shouting at the Muslim defendants during their trial for the 1973 Hanafi murders. Police returned the money Wednesday night.

—A halt to the screening of the movie "Muhammad, Messenger of God," which was scheduled for its American premiere on Wednesday in New York and Los Angeles. The distributor immediately stopped the film in mid-screening after learning of Abdul Khaalis' demand. Abdul Khaalis said the film was "a fairy tale" that demeaned and distorted the Islamic faith, although few other Moslems have objected to it.

In Chicago, Wallace Muhammad denied responsibility for the 1973 Hanafi slayings and said he deplored Wednesday's violence.

Four to six gunmen, including Khaalis, stormed the B'nai B'rith headquarters around 11 a.m., wounding eight persons and herding 100 or more hostages onto the top floor of the eight-story building. Police said 43 persons either were released or escaped the terrorists by hiding.

Of the wounded, two were hospitalized overnight, three were treated and released, and three still were being held by the terrorists. The condition of the wounded hostages was not known.

An hour after the first invasion, up to three more gunmen took the Islamic Center on Embassy Row, apparently without violence or injury. They retained 14 hostages, including center director Dr. Abdul Rauf, of the city's highest-ranking Moslem.

One of the gunmen told a reporter by telephone that their actions were coordinated with Khaalis' group, and that "heads will roll" unless demands are met.

At 2:30 in the afternoon two more gunmen opened fire on the fifth floor of the District Building, where Mayor Walter Washington and the city council were at work.

They killed Maurice Williams, 24, an employee of WHUR-FM. City Councilman Marion Barry was wounded in the chest by a ricochet bullet, and two security guards were wounded, one critically. A fourth man, identified only as a building guard, lay motionless for hours under the guns of the invaders and was thought to be dead, but rescuers found him alive when they evacuated him. His condition was not known.

President Carter ordered the FBI onto the case in midafternoon, and director Clarence Kelley and Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell shuttled to and from police headquarters during the night.

Police said all three groups appeared to be in communication by telephone, although they could not say with certainty that the city hall group was related to the others. However, the city hall gunmen made no independent demands.

Abdul Khaalis told reporters that the city hall gunmen were part of his group.

Officials said they were negotiating with the terrorists but they would not describe the discussions. There were reports that Dr. Rauf had asked diplomats from Moslem countries to intercede, and that this was being done.

Abdul Khaalis was born Ernest McGhee in Gary, Ind.

The Hanafi Moslems are a small mostly black group never before blamed for violence in the United States. They number perhaps 1,000 and consider themselves the only true followers of Islam. They are not part of the Black Muslims, a much larger organization.

MS Home Care Course Offered

The American National Red Cross and the National Multiple Sclerosis Society will be co-operating on a nationwide basis to offer a course of instruction for home care of multiple sclerosis patients.

The 20 hour course will be geared primarily for family members and friends or attendants of moderately to severely disabled homebound MS patients. It may also be of great benefit to health care workers. The two organizations will collaborate to select highly knowledgeable and skilled lecturers in their fields to cover various topics. The course itself will be free, though there will be a nominal charge for textbooks and literature. The Pickaway County Chapter is making plans to co-operate in this project, either by conducting the course in Circleville or by helping participants to go to Columbus to receive the training. In order to decide which is the feasible plan, it is necessary to know how many people may be interested.

It would be appreciated if those who are afflicted, have family members needing care or are interested in receiving the training would call the Red Cross at 474-5736. If more than 15 or 20 people are interested, it may be possible to schedule the course in Circleville.

Warnke Wins Vote As Arms Negotiator

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is giving President Carter the man he wants to negotiate nuclear weapons reductions with the Russians, but the vote confirming Paul C. Warnke was less than the two-thirds margin that will be needed to ratify any treaty he brings back.

Opponents viewed the 58-40 vote Wednesday as advance warning to President Carter and the Soviet Union that a new SALT treaty will undergo the most vigorous Senate examination and nothing short of equality will be accepted.

Supporters of the former assistant secretary of defense contended throughout the four-day Senate debate that Warnke has the capacity to be a "tough negotiator" despite his frequent advocacy of defense budget cuts, opposition to new nuclear weapons systems, and suggestions of unilateral initiatives by the United States in arms restraint while calling on Russia to reciprocate.

They pointed out that Warnke will be acting under the direction of President Carter, who described himself Wednesday as "chief negotiator." Carter, before the vote, charged that most of those opposing Warnke's nomination "don't want to see substantial reductions in nuclear weapons in the world."

Twelve Democrats joined 28 Republicans in voting against Warnke, a 57-year-old Washington lawyer, for SALT negotiator. Forty-eight Democrats and 10 Republicans voted for.

Warnke also was confirmed to be director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency by a 70-29 vote, with 56 Democrats and 14 Republicans voting for and 24 Republicans and five Democrats voting against.

Senate Minority Leader Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn., said he saw no direct relationship between the size of the vote and Warnke's effectiveness as a negotiator, but he said it was "a signal of sorts in public and international perception of what the Senate is likely to agree to" in treaty form.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said he did not subscribe to the view that Warnke's influence as a negotiator has been damaged by the Senate debate.

But Byrd said he would personally resist any executive branch lobbying for ratification of a SALT II treaty. The judgment, he said, is one for the Senate to reach based on "its own independent study and consideration — unaffected in any way by partisan or other factors."

Tires Taken From Cars

Four tires and wheels were taken from used Cadillacs at Clifton Motor Sales, 1395 S. Court St., after 8 p.m. Wednesday.

Pickaway County Deputy Sheriff Nick Franklin said the loss estimate was $567.

The thieves apparently became frightened while stealing the tires, and left seven hub caps and two fender skirts, all valued at $415, in the trunk of one of the cars.

Clifton Service Manager Rick Stacy said two of the tires and wheels were taken from the left side of a 1975 Cadillac Eldorado and the spare tire was taken from the trunk.

The other tire and wheel and fender skirts were taken from the left side of a 1975 Cadillac Sedan DeVille.

Ohio Community Health Assn. Discusses Governor's Budget

The Ohio Community Mental Health Association met in Columbus for a three day seminar on March 1, 2, and 3.

In order to provide adequate mental health services in the community based clinics the association took several positions on the Governors biennial State budget.

1. Request that a Title XX Rotary fund be established within the Department of Mental Health. This would speed up the flow of money to (648) Boards to reimburse their contract agencies for mental health services that have already been provided in the clinics. A one time allocation of $5 million to the Department of Mental Health is being requested.

2. A request to appropriate $10 million to the Department of Mental Health for funding aftercare programs. As the Department of Mental Health attempts to reach the goal of state facilities accreditation by July 1, 1979, many additional patients will need to be discharged. There is currently no means available for State financial participation to provide service for these people in the community setting. This appropriation would provide funds to enable agencies to hire mental health professionals to give follow-up care for these persons and further decrease possibility for future rehospitalization.

3. Recommend that $10 million be transferred from the institutional budget into the community (648) allocation of their budgets. 648 Boards were legislated eight years ago under the intent of increasing funds each year to them. No increase has been given since 1973. The present bill calls for an increase. The Association feels the proposed budget is a necessity in order to provide adequate mental health service to our communities.

George Puchovich, executive director of 648 Board; Charles Evans, associate director; Jean Bildsten, public information co-ordinator; Leroy Davis, Ph.D. member of the (648) Boards, attended the association meeting to express concerns about providing mental health service in the rural setting. They represented Paint Valley Mental Health and Mental Retardation Board.

Three People Injured In Accidents

Three people were injured in two auto accidents investigated Wednesday by Pickaway County Sheriff's Deputies.

The first accident occurred 9:23 a.m. when Diann K. Howard, 33, Route 1, Orient, lost control of her car on the Williamsport-Palestine Road just south of the Guy Road intersection.

Deputy Sheriff Dan Dewey said Howard failed to negotiate a curve to the right and her car traveled left of center into a ditch.

The vehicle returned to the road, but swerved sharply to the left and rolled to its right side.

After a short slide, the car rolled over and came to rest on its wheels.

A passenger, Judith A. Hill, 34, 8615 Harrisburg Pike, was treated at Mt. Carmel West Hospital, Columbus, for contusions to her scalp.

Two people were hurt in a crash between two Volkswagens 6:45 p.m. on the Walnut Creek Pike.

Sandra A. Fletcher, 18, Route 2, was treated at Berger Hospital for neck and back injuries and later released, and Suzanne K. Christy, 18, 33 E. South St., Ashville, was referred to a doctor for injuries to her right arm.

Kyle S. Christy, three months, was checked at the hospital, but was apparently not hurt in the crash.

Deputy Sheriff J. Phillip Brown said the Christy car was following the Fletcher auto north on the Walnut Creek Pike and attempted to pass as Fletcher was making a left turn into a private drive.

Impact occurred in the southbound lane, he said.

Sunday Beer Sale Bill Passes House

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Signs saying "no beer sold on Sunday" will probably come down soon in many areas of Ohio if a bill approved by the House on Wednesday becomes law.

With only brief debate, the House sent the Senate 64-29 a measure that permits Sunday sale of high powered (six per cent) beer along with wine and mixed beverages no stronger than 21 per cent alcohol, subject to approval at local option elections.

Rep. Patrick J. Seeney, D-6 Cleveland, found only one House member speaking against his Sunday beer and wine bill. It was just the opposite of the emotional, marathon debate seven years ago when the House okayed local options on Sunday sale of liquor by the glass.

Rep. Alan E. Norris, R-27 Westerville, said the latest bill was not needed since beer drinkers have the option of stocking up for the weekend. He also charged that it came about as a result of pressure from owners of carryouts and other beer retailers. "A couple of special interest groups are going to get a lot of money," said Norris, whose House district claims to have been the birthplace of prohibition.

Sweeney brushed aside the Franklin County Republican's arguments, saying Ohioans have the right to make such decisions at the local level. The bill "just gives us a little addition reality," said the veteran Cleveland legislator.
